Indorses Bill To Include State, Local Employes Who Get U. S. Pay

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

As the Senate debated the measure, President Roosevelt gave his official blessing yesterday to the Hatch bill to extend a ban on political activity to District, State and local employes paid from Federal funds.

The broadening of last year's Hatch Act, which applies only to Federal employes, was indorsed by the President at his biweekly press conference. If restrictions on political activity are to be placed on one type of Federal worker, the President maintained, they should apply equally to other employes paid in whole or in part by the Federal Government.

The bill now under consideration would affect some 250,000 individuals. The Post was informed unofficially last night.

Democrats Split Widely

Senate debate, which on the surface was rather desultory for the most part, emphasized the deep rift in Democratic ranks over advisability of extending the prohibition against politics to State employes.

Mindful that this is an election year, some Senators protested that the bill would deprive American citizens of their "God-given right" to participate in politics, while others feared Federal infringement on State prerogatives.

The Republicans, who took almost no part in the argument, are expected to support the bill, which will meet its real test today in a vote on an amendment proposed by Senator Miller (Democrat), of Arkansas.

This amendment would strike out of the original Hatch Act and the pending bill all prohibition against voluntary political activity, but would retain the penalties against coercion.

Hatch Assails Miller Plan

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, author of the politics ban, declared last night that if the Miller amendment is passed, he will ask that the entire measure be defeated. Miller's proposal, he said, "would leave no bill at all."

While most of the Senators who spoke yesterday attacked various clauses in the Hatch measure, one who came to the defense was Senator Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky.

As spectators recalled that Chandler was defeated by Majority Leader Barkley in a 1938 Senatorial primary marked by charges of political coercion on both sides, the junior Senator from Kentucky said he would support the bill. Barkley also has indorsed the measure.

"Some of us who have recently been Governors of States" have been threatened by Federal agencies "with withdrawal of public funds if we didn't line up thus and so," exclaimed Chandler, who was Governor of Kentucky until he entered the Senate on the death of Senator Logan last year.

"At one time I had some opportunity and some reason, I thought, to complain about the use of people against a candidate in a Federal election," Chandler declared.

On the other hand, Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, veteran anti-New Dealer, urged that "if we're going to clean house, let's start where the dirty work begins." He told his colleagues that "you know" that the "billions" for relief and social security are being spent "to buy votes."

Third-Term Bulletin:

Roosevelt to Break Silence—He'll Tell the Census Man!

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday jovially turned aside three direct third-term queries but said he might confide in a Government census taker just to see if he would keep the secret.

In high good humor, the President parried, sidestepped or smilingly ignored press conference questions on his political plans that have met impatient rejoinders at some White House press sessions.

He said he had not read a column in Monday's Post by Ernest K. Lindley, his biographer and friend. The article quoted the President as having informed a Southern member of Congress that he wanted to retire, favored Secretary of State Hull for President, and cited the religion of Postmaster General Farley as an objection in the South to Farley on the ticket.

The President said he knew nothing about his name having been entered in the Pennsylvania Presidential preference primaries and so could not answer a query on whether he would withdraw it.

When a reporter caught him up on a statement that no one had anything to hide from the Government, and asked if he had a mortgage on 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, he joined in the general laughter. He said he might tell a genuine census taker, to test out the Government's ability to keep information confidential.

He repeatedly insisted he had not read the front page column by Lindley. But he had read, he said, a column on the second page in the same issue of The Post by Harlan Miller, discussing the four Jeffersonian categories of news—truths, probabilities, possibilities or lies.

Pressed as to whether The Post article came within the "truth" category, the President laughed again, saying he did not know as he had not read it. But he had

Wholesale Liquor Quiz Hinted Here

Eberharter Will Follow Up Rumors Of Monopoly; Kronheim Named

An investigation of the wholesale distribution of liquor in Washington will be made by the special House subcommittee on administration of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, Chairman Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, indicated yesterday.

The chairman said he would seek information on rumors of monopolistic methods after Ralph A. Lee, Class C licensee, had testified he bought 40 to 50 per cent of his spirits from one wholesaler because his bartender told him that the dealer was "very close" to the ABC Board.

Lee identified the wholesale dealer as Milton Kronheim, who was in the room at the time.

Schafer Takes Hand

Subsequently, Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, who heard Lee's testimony, expressed the opinion that the House should give the subcommittee enough money to conduct a thorough investigation of what he termed "the liquor trust."

Schafer, not a member of the House District Committee, took notes on the testimony although he did not explain his interest in the District inquiry.

As the Eberharter subcommittee prepared to hear defenders of the present liquor licensing system today, it was learned it had obtained information which showed that the bulk of the local liquor business is handled by a Baltimore firm.

Lee, Schulte Clash

Lee, who had been recalled to the witness stand upon demand of two District Committee members, clashed with Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, who questioned him about a conversation the Congressman said had taken place in his office.

Schulte said Lee had told him that "an individual" had promised to help him obtain a license if he bought liquor from that person.

Lee insisted he did not recall the conversation or having made such a statement, although Schulte shouted that he wanted the truth and threatened to have the testimony "impounded."

Although Lee had testified previously that "three or four persons" had approached him with offers to help him get a Class C license, the

England Detains Vessels Bearing 70,000 Tons Of German Fuel

By James B. Reston.

London, March 5.—Ignoring Premier Mussolini's plea that German coal is "an indispensable necessity for the life and work of the Italian people," British warships intercepted seven Italian ships carrying around 70,000 tons of this coal through the English Channel today and forced them into the contraband control base at the Downs.

[Early this morning, the Associated Press reported from London that a total of 12 Italian ships were in or near the contraband station at the Downs. It was not clear, the dispatch stated, whether the later arrivals came voluntarily or under guidance of British warships.—Editor's note.]

This action was taken while officials of the Foreign Office and the ministry for economic warfare drafted a polite British rejection of the sharp Italian note protesting against the British decision to seize German coal exports.

Total Brought to 12

The British had warned Italian officials in Rome that Italian ships loading German coal at Rotterdam would be seized if they left the Dutch port after midnight March 1. The Italian government evidently decided to test the firmness of the British decision.

While it is realized this action has all the makings of serious trouble with Italy, it is maintained here the entire British blockade of Germany will break down if the British, who insist it is their legal right to intercept German exports, allow the shipments of German coal to continue.

British officials repudiate suggestions that the stoppage of this coal is simply a device to force Italy to purchase British coal. On the contrary, they say, they have no objection to the Italians purchasing coal from the United States, Belgium or any other neutral country.

Britain Offers Credits

It is felt that since Premier Mussolini, with one eye on Berlin, refused to take British coal in exchange for Italian airplane engines, guns and ammunition, and did not in three months arrange an

50 Civilians Slain, Scores Hurt As Reds Bomb Hospital, Shelter

Five Direct Hits Made, Helsinki Reports; Women Seeking Refuge Killed in Raid; Finn Defenders Keep Grip on Viipuri

By Max Harrelson,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki (Wednesday), March 6.—At least 50 persons were killed and scores wounded in a small south central Finnish town yesterday when Russian planes executed one of their severest bombing raids of the war.

Five direct hits were scored on a hospital. One bomb dropped on an airraid shelter.

The raiders, diving out of the clouds to 1,400 or 1,700 feet, swept over in two flights 50 minutes apart.

Fifteen of the bombs struck in the vicinity of a military hospital and one big explosive went down the stairway from the top of the four-story building to the bottom.

Twenty-five persons, nearly all of them women, were killed when a bomb hit the top of the airraid shelter.

Two hundred bombs, all effective, were dropped in the raid by 32 planes just after a party of five foreign newspaper correspondents and photographers arrived in the town. (Military censorship forbids naming the town.)

The attack came as the Finns with their own air force had bombed and machine-gunned Red army detachments attempting to cross ice-crusted Viipuri Bay. The Finns said they still were holding the Russians at the outskirts of that battered port.

(Wednesday's Red army communique, which referred to air ac-

Fascists Hopeful Other Neutrals Will Support Them; Protest Unanswered

By Herbert L. Matthews.

Rome, March 5.—The British seizure today of Italian ships bearing German coal from Rotterdam has stunned Italy and certainly greatly aggravated an already serious situation.

Sources close to the government expressed themselves as "terribly surprised." "This completely alters the situation," they said, "and it may lead to grave developments."

It was confidently expected here this morning that the British would accept the Italian explanation that the ships in question were loaded before March 1, and could not sail on account of bad weather. No one expected they would be seized. On the other hand, it was realized that the Italian action represented a defiance to the British—and now the British have accepted the challenge.

For England this is a question of her whole blockade policy, which she considers a matter of life and death, as well as her major weapon against Germany. On the other hand, for Italy this is also a vital matter and she has engaged her prestige.

Britain Must Answer

There will almost certainly be another still stronger protest, but official knowledge of the seizure has not yet reached Rome. However, so far as the general situation is concerned the next move is up to England, for she must answer the Italian note and a great deal will depend on the terms of the reply. All signs point to its being conciliatory in form, but firm in substance. Yet there are still hopes here that a compromise can be reached.

Meanwhile, the Italians are hoping that other neutrals will rally to their side, since they feel they are fighting for the rights of all nonbelligerents, although it must be admitted that there are no signs of such support today. The enthusiasm thus far is primarily confined to Berlin.

Italians Irritated

The whole development is obviously driving Italy in the direction of the German camp, not so much from sympathy with Berlin as from antipathy to London. The attitude of the British is irritating the Italians intensely.

They feel as if England is going to treat this as a minor incident and to act toward Italy as she would toward any small neutral. That is something for which Italians say they will not stand. They have built an empire and consider themselves a first rate power and they demand to be treated as such.

The reports about British troop concentrations in Kenya, for instance, are regarded here as a part of the whole irritating game. It is considered the same sort of pressure as Anthony Eden tried to use in 1935 when the British fleet was concentrated in the Mediterranean as a threat to Premier Mussolini in his Ethiopian venture.

Italians say the attempt is no more likely to succeed this time than in 1935.

Belgrade Sympathetic

Belgrade, March 5.—Sympathy is felt here for the Italian position in the coal dispute with Britain because it is believed that during Dr. Karl Clodius, recent economic parleys in Rome, strong German pressure was exercised on Italy.

Republican Wins Wallace's District Race

Democrat Concedes Defeat for Dowell's Seat in U. S. House

By the Associated Press

Des Moines, Iowa, March 5.—The Sixth Iowa District held true to its Republican traditions in convincing fashion today by electing Robert K. Goodwin, 33, Mayor of Redfield, Iowa, to fill the unexpired term of the late Representative Cassius C. Dowell.

Byron G. Allen, 38, of Des Moines, Democratic candidate who campaigned on a New Deal platform, conceded defeat.

With 198 out of 218 precincts tabulated, Goodwin held a three to two lead over Allen.

The vote: Goodwin, 28,495; Allen, 18,079; W. W. Klein (Independent), 382.

Goodwin was out in front in every one of the six counties in the district.

The special election had been heralded the country over as a test of the New Deal's comeback power in Iowa after the Republican triumph in 1938.

[The above tabulation gives the Republican nominee slightly less than 61 per cent of the total vote. Two years ago Representative Dowell won with slightly more than 59 per cent of the ballots cast.—Editor's note.]

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's home is here, and Allen sought in his campaign to establish the AAA

Wender Urges Vote Instead Of Lump Sum

House Committee May Curb Testimony On D.C. Reorganization

By James D. Secrest

Some limitation on the testimony of witnesses appearing before the House subcommittee on District reorganization will be considered, members indicated yesterday, due to the growing list of citizens asking to be heard.

Almost two score civic representatives have asked for time, according to a committee clerk, and only a half dozen have testified during the three sessions held.

A delegation of undertakers appeared at the Capitol yesterday afternoon prepared to protest against a provision of the Seal reorganization bill and left disgruntled when informed that the hearing had recessed until 10:30 o'clock this morning.

Clashes Over Suffrage

The morning session was marked by friendly clashes between suffrage proponents and members of the subcommittee who came repeatedly to the defense of the District Commissioners and the present form of the municipal government.

A bombshell exploded within the ranks of the suffrage advocates when Harry S. Wender, vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said that he would be willing to exchange the present $6,000,000 Federal payment to the District government for the right of self-government.

Calling the United States contribution "a mess of pottage," Wender said:

"I would be willing to throw $6,000,000 in the Potomac River as a price for the vote and have my own taxes increased as a result."

Subsequently he tempered this with the opinion that the Federal Government contributes too little to the cost of operating the District government.

Dutch Assail Nazis' Sinking, Bombing Ships

Tonnage and Death Toll Mounts, Press Condemns Germany

Copyright by New York Times

Amsterdam, March 5.—Merciless attacks on Dutch shipping by German planes and submarines in recent weeks have aroused public indignation to a fever pitch.

The leading newspapers attack what they characterize as German attempts to frighten ships into remaining in port, and point out that since the beginning of the war 80,000 tons of Dutch shipping, or 2¼ to 2½ per cent of the total tonnage, have been destroyed, and that 220 Dutch seamen have lost their lives.

Nazi Regulations Changeable

While British contraband regulations have been studied and applied in part, it has been only to the extent that, though incompatible with Dutch freedom on the high seas, they have served as a guide to practical conduct. On the other hand German contraband regulations have been characterized by their changeableness.

As recently as yesterday a German official statement said Germany would not object if a neutral ship were forced to visit an enemy port for examination of her cargo. Yet the Bergerdijk, carrying a cargo of grain consigned to the Dutch government, was torpedoed on the grounds that she might be forced to visit the Downs, British channel contraband control base.

One Torpedoed at Night

The steamer Tara was torpedoed without an examination of her papers and without warning, at night. The Arenskirk, although admittedly carrying no contraband, was, nevertheless, torpedoed on the pretext that she was sailing to an enemy port. And during last week nine more Dutch ships were attacked and bombed on the pretext that they were "in dangerous waters."

U. S. Offers To Sell Guns To Neutrals

Surplus Arms Date From World War; Finns May Not Buy

By John G. Norris

The Army yesterday put up for sale to nonbelligerent nations throughout the world more than 170,000 surplus rifles, machine guns and artillery pieces.

Following a study of equipment on hand and our own needs, the War Department submitted to President Roosevelt a list of arms it recommends be declared surplus for sale abroad. The list was revealed after an announcement that 90 heavy field guns have already been sold to Brazil.

The President last month announced that certain surplus Army and Navy equipment would be sold to neutrals and directed the War and Navy departments to prepare lists of materials for sale.

Officials said the equipment was serviceable and in good condition, but had been replaced in our Army by improved models. All of the guns, it was stated, date from the World War.

Offers to buy surplus munitions have been made by Sweden, Nor-

Germans Raid Front Line, Take British Prisoners

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, March 5 (AP).—British prisoners were captured in a German raid on a British front line outpost, a British general headquarters communique said today.

The communique said the raid "took place this morning against a post in the British front line and the enemy succeeded in capturing some prisoners.

"The post was recaptured and the enemy retired, leaving one dead. Two British soldiers were killed and one wounded."

The communique was the first to report any fighting since British troops arrived on an active front.

Motorist Singing Of 'Lucky Guy' Haled Into Court

Thomas Bruce Morgan, 20, of 2703 Bladensburg road northeast, was driving along Third street northwest yesterday, happy as a lark and proving it by song.

He turned into Constitution avenue only to have his aria disturbed by the harsh voice of Motorcycle Policeman R. O. Bankert's siren.

According to Bankert, Morgan drove through a red light at the intersection. Also, the policeman added, the motorist was aiding his vocal renditions by a song sheet propped against the steering wheel.

Bankert took him to the Traffic Division and charged him with failing to stop for the light and failing to have emergency control. Morgan posted $15 collateral for his appearance at Traffic Court Friday.

The song sheet, confiscated as evidence, listed such numbers as "You're a Lucky Guy" and "From the Indies to the Andes in Your Undies."

Col. Johnson Mum On 'Candidacy' For Governorship

Col. Louis A. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, yesterday declined to comment on reports that the rival "Federal" and "Statehouse" factions of the West Virginia Democratic Party have asked him to become a compromise candidate for Governor.

The Dominion-News, of Morgantown, W. Va., asserted yesterday that Col. Johnson "is giving the matter serious consideration."

The so-called "Federal" group of the Democratic Party in West Virginia is led by Senator Matthew Neely, considered a possible candidate for Governor, while the "Statehouse" faction is led by Gov. Homer Holt and H. G. Kump, a candidate for the Senate.

The Dominion-News predicted Neely would not seek the gubernatorial nomination if Johnson decides to make the race.

AAA Reports It Paid Millions To Insurance Firms on Farms

Insurance companies and banks received millions of dollars in soil conservation benefits from the Agriculture Department in 1937, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration reported to Congress yesterday.

Payments, made as a result of cooperation in the soil conservation program, were on farms which the insurance companies and banks had acquired through foreclosure proceedings.

More than 20,000 concerns of different kinds and individual farmers received payments of $1,000 or more, the AAA said. Soil conservation payments during the year totaled $325,856,887. Eleven payments exceeded $100,000 each. They were:

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., $257,095; the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, $231,158; the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, $206,962; Travelers Insurance Co., $211,521; Union Central Life Insurance Co. of Ohio, $166,280; Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. of New Jersey, $161,110; Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Wisconsin, $156,444; John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Massachusetts, $147,847; Federal Land Bank of Omaha, Nebr., $134,139; the King Ranch of Texas, $122,140, and the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, Minn., $108,935.

$1,010,000,000 Treasury Balance Held Minimum

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday took issue with two of his colleagues who proposed the Treasury draw down its large cash balance as a means of avoiding taxes or a hike in the $45,000,000,000 public debt limit.

Byrd pointed out that President Roosevelt's January budget had already called for a reduction in the balance to a figure which the Treasury regards as a minimum for safety. The next fiscal year, he explained, will start with a balance of $1,010,000,000.

Senators Wheeler and Adams had suggested that the Treasury might dig further into its cash balance.

Quantico Bride, 19, Held in Robbery

Boston, March 5 (AP).—Mrs. Jay Carter, 19, who became the bride of a marine at Quantico, Va., two weeks ago, was held in $5,000 bail today on a charge of armed robbery.

Police charged she was in the company of three youths who robbed a store of $25 and then escaped in a hail of police bullets.

Mrs. Carter, who asserted she was innocent, later was released in the custody of a parole officer.

Russia Regrets Raid on Pajala

Stockholm March 5 (AP).—An official announcement today said the Russian government had handed the Swedish legation in Moscow a note apologizing for the bombing of Pajala, Swedish town near the Finnish border, on February 21, by Red army planes.

Previously the Soviet government, through its official news agencies, had denied the bombing. Today's action followed a new investigation.

New York, March 5 (AP).—A million-dollar fire late today swept an incompleted block-long hangar at LaGuardia Field, new $4,000,000 municipal airport.

The hangar, valued at $1,250,000, was under lease to Transcontinental & Western Air and was to have been put in operation late this month. It was the center one of a bank of three.

Early tonight, while red-hot steel slabs from the roof and sides of the vast sprawling building still were crashing in thin showers of sparks, it appeared that peril to the two adjoining hangars, of similar size and cost, had been averted.

Among other officials on hand was Mayor LaGuardia, who led the campaign for the construction of the great airport, which was built by WPA labor near the World's Fair grounds at North Beach, Queens.

Among the hundreds of firemen sent to the field no casualties were reported. At least five, however, barely escaped burial—as did Maj. Elmer Haslett, the airport director—beneath a half molten mass of metal which thundered down when roof collapsed.

William H. Peters, a WPA laborer, said the fire sprang up as a "small blaze" in a paint locker. Police said it appeared accidental. No airplanes were inside.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Palm Beach, March 6.

On my second day in Florida I heard the heart-rending story of the elderly gentleman with the high blood-pressure. He came down here to get away from all this third-term talk, which wasn't doing him any good, up north.

Harlan Miller

* * * *

As he unpacked he began to tell the bellhop what he thought of Roosevelt, in direct violation of doctor's orders. He started gently, almost compassionately, alluding to "that man in the White House" and "that traitor to his class."

In a stern sort of way he seemed to be enjoying it.

* * * *

But something set him off, explosively.

Maybe it was a certain insincerity, real or fancied, in the bellhop's sympathetic noises.

He hadn't got much beyond "scoundrel" and "dictator" when he had a slight heart attack. Just caved in, right there in his $50-a-day suite.

* * * *

They took him away to a quiet place, with a trained nurse who's under orders not to discuss anything that's happened since 1895. When Roosevelt darted vengefully through Florida on his way to a cruiser at Pensacola, he wasn't told; his paper was clipped.

He doesn't know that Mrs. Roosevelt is sojourning near Miami. Even Jim Farley's visit was kept from him.

"—violated doctor's orders"

They didn't discharge the bellhop, because he was able to prove that he hadn't brought up Roosevelt. (And they rented the suite promptly, too.) They merely instructed him that next time a guest brings up the subject he's to rush off and bring a bowl of kumquats or the latest copy of the Wall Street Journal.

* * * *

Keen, alert old gaffers who make it a point to keep tab on the pulse of public opinion always ask bellhops, oil station attendants, chambermaids and waiters what they think of Roosevelt.

But Floridians have learned to be non-committal discreet and diplomatic.

* * * *

"That man's a caution, ain't he?" is a typical safe rejoinder.

A taxicab driver in Jacksonville explained to me why he always uses "That man's a caution" as his opening maneuver.

"From there I can move in either direction," he said. "No matter what my passenger says, I'm in a position to agree with him."

* * * *

So far, though, he hasn't hauled any tourists who had anything good to say about Roosevelt.

"Maybe they go to California," he said.

* * * *

There are bolder spirits, though, in the vast army which tries to keep the tourists happy and comfortable.

"I start out right off the bat by denouncing Roosevelt," a clever, realistic waiter told me. "I call him a menace with the crab meat or the fruit cocktail, and I let him have it right through the camembert and the demitasse."

"I get some pretty fat tips that way," he added, as an afterthought.

"—target on the Riviera"

You don't see any pictures of Roosevelt in the high-priced hotels. There was some talk that Jim Farley, because of his association with Roosevelt, should be smuggled up and down in freight elevators, until a smart public relations man remembered that Jim is anti-third-term.

* * * *

Elliott Roosevelt probably could get a free suite at the more exclusive hotels, and become the hero of the Florida Riviera, because of his stiff front toward his pappy.

He's the rugged individualist deluxe, and often is mentioned hereabouts as a broth of a boy.

* * * *

The real strength of the anti-third-term sentiment up north won't be felt until people return from their winter vacations. And Florida will remain sympathetically anti-Roosevelt until the last tourist leaves. Meanwhile they can throw darts at pictures of Roosevelt.

Census Battle Just 'Politics,' Roosevelt Says

Tobey Retorts He's Guilty of 'Poor Taste' Because of Comment

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday hurled a politics charge against Congressional crusaders for changes in the 1940 census, and in turn was accused by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, of displaying "poor taste" by "obtruding himself" in a legislative matter.

The President allowed reporters attending his press conference to quote him directly—a privilege extended rarely.

"The whole thing," he declared, "is an obvious political move. Everybody connected with Congress knows that is the motive."

Tobey to Answer on Air

Tobey, leader of the Congressional fight against questions which might be construed as an "invasion of privacy," angrily announced that he would answer the President in a radio address Saturday night.

"As a purveyor and producer of politics," he declared, "the President is a past master, but in his statement today he dodges the real issue and creates a smoke screen to cover it up."

He said thousands of persons, including Democrats and Republicans, "cry out against this attempted violation of the citizen's inherent right of privacy."

"Their outraged feelings," he said, "cannot be shunted aside by the false charge of 'politics.'

"I regret that the President is the first man to ridicule the protests of these people and charge them with having political motives."

Wonders About Secrecy

The President was asked for comment on the Toby resolution which would put the Senate on record as favoring deletion from the census of a question on the amount of salaries and wages up to $5,000, and another as to whether the persons interviewed had received additional income in excess of $50 in the preceding 12 months.

The President said he wondered whether anyone in the room at that moment had anything to hide from the Federal Government with regard to the issues raised. He said he did not have anything to hide.

Confidence Is Required

Taking as an example the census question as to whether a person had been divorced, he commented that the person interviewed might not want his neighbors to know the answer to this question. But the Federal Government, he declared, is not interested in this matter in the least from a personal standpoint.

It is important, he said, that it should have accurate information with which to chart the curve of marriage and divorce. Moreover, he pointed out, all census information is required to be kept confidential.

The President's remarks followed by a few hours the action of the Senate Commerce Committee in postponing a decision on the Tobey resolution for one week. The committee divided 10 to 5 on the question.

Other developments were:

The New York Senate adopted a resolution memorializing Congress to eliminate "personal questions" from the census and to abolish the criminal penalty which the law now imposes on persons refusing to answer questions. The resolution was sent to the assembly, which was expected to concur.

Tobey was at work on a new resolution designed to bring about the deletion of additional questions from the census. He said, however, that he would await the action of the commerce committee.

Noble Asks Delay

The committee postponed action on the Tobey resolution at the request of Undersecretary of Commerce Noble, who was said to have urged committee members to read the testimony presented before a subcommittee, which on Monday approved the resolution by a three to two vote.

The Tobey resolution would not have the standing of law, since it would merely put the Senate on record. But, if adopted, the Commerce Department probably would delete the income questions, which officials say were included at the request of businessmen who desire accurate wage and salary statistics.

On Capitol Hill

The long-deferred Federal judgeship which Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, has been expected to receive was the subject of another talk yesterday between the Senator and President Roosevelt. Schwellenbach would not reveal the trend of the conversation.

Schwellenbach

The Washington Senator has been handicapped by failure to obtain from Gov. Martin appointment of a man satisfactory to the Administration to succeed Schwellenbach in the Senate. Stephen F. Chadwick, generally considered opposed to the New Deal, has been discussed widely in Washington for the Senate appointment. However, it is known that much pressure has been put on the Governor to appoint George F. Gannon, active Democrat leader and former campaign manager for the Governor.

The House passed and sent to the White House yesterday a bill to authorize posthumous appointment of Arthur Mortimer Fields, jr., as an ensign in the Navy.

Midshipmen Fields stood number five in the class which graduated from the Naval Academy in June, 1939. He received the degree of B. S. and a certificate of graduation. Because of his physical condition, however, he was not commissioned. He died July 19, 1939.

Establishment of an eight-man Federal Tax Commission to study revision, clarification and simplification of Federal taxation would be provided under a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Celler (Democrat), New York.

The board would study and report to Congress with a view to introduction of legislation to raise necessary revenue in an "equitable manner," simplify the tax system and coordinate it with those of States and municipalities, to avoid double taxation, to equalize the tax burden and to prevent tax evasion.

As twilight fell over Capitol Hill, a small but determined posse of clerks and building attendants last night pressed anew their search for a pet alligator lost somewhere in the "wilds." of the office suite of Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida.

One of three such pets kept by the Senator, Claude, 2 feet long, a year old and owner of a wicked set of teeth, was being exercised on the carpeted floor with two colleagues, Oscar and Jiggs, when he disappeared.

The Gallup Poll

Survey Indicates Economy May Have Stronger Vote Appeal Than Spending

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 5.—It has been an accepted axiom among many politicians in recent years that one of the best arguments a Senator or a Congressman can use to win votes is to point out how much Federal money he brought to his district or his State.

GALLUP

While this was undoubtedly a powerful campaign appeal in the early days of depression a new national study of public opinion furnishes some evidence that this type of appeal has lost much of its potency—that to advocate cuts in Federal spending is not as politically dangerous as many people have thought.

Heretofore, many politicians took the view that while the public might be against spending in the abstract, the voters were always glad to approve spending programs in their own localities. There is no conclusive proof that this attitude of voters is not still present, for much depends on the nature of the spending and the type of locality. But the survey does indicate a reasonable doubt that this feeling continues to exist.

In fact, a majority of voters say that, other things being equal, they would prefer a candidate who promised to cut Federal spending rather than a candidate who promised to bring more Federal money into their State.

The survey was taken by the Institute for the purpose of discovering just what voters would say if confronted with two candidates, one promising more money for the State, and the other advocating economy. The issue was stated specifically as follows:

"Suppose there were two candidates for United States Senator in your State. One candidate promises to vote to reduce all Federal Government spending. The other promises to vote to spend more Federal Government money in your State. Other things being equal, which candidate would you vote for?"

Those expressing an opinion voted as follows:

For Candidate Who Favors Spending 36%
For Candidate Who Favors Economy 64

Approximately one voter in every eight (13 per cent) expressed no opinion.

This survey is not, of course, conclusive evidence of how voters would behave on election day, but it is an indication of a basic public attitude which, though not necessarily holding in all instances, may nevertheless become an important factor in the campaign.

Especially significant for the campaign is the fact that, numerically speaking, most of the support for economy comes from the middle income voters ($20 to $40 a week, the group which holds the balance of power in a Presidential election. These people constitute nearly half of the voting population and no party which fails to carry a majority of the middle group can hope to win.

As might be expected, sentiment for spending is greater in the lower income group than in either the middle or upper group, but even among the lower income voters (less than $20) sentiment is about evenly divided between spending and economy.

	For Candidate Who Promises Spending	For Candidate Who Promises Economy
Upper income group.....	19%	81%
Middle income group.....	31	69
Lower income group.....	51	49

The sharp split of opinion among the income brackets is matched by an equally sharp division between the political parties. Among Democrats reached in the poll, sentiment was about evenly divided on spending and economy, with a slight majority (51 per cent) for spending. Among Republicans, however, the vote was more than 8 to 2 in favor of the candidate with an economy platform.

Colored Communist Describes Garner as 'Evil,' Says Roosevelt Helped Scuttle Lynch Bill

By the Associated Press

While Senate sponsors of anti-lynching legislation protested that he was hurting their cause, Benjamin Davis, colored Communist, called Vice President Garner an "evil old labor baiter" yesterday and accused him of agreeing with President Roosevelt to "scuttle" the antilynch bill.

Davis, who identified himself as an associate editor of the Daily Worker, testified at a tumultous hearing before a Senate judiciary subcommittee considering an anti-lynching bill already passed by the House. The measure would provide penalties for counties and county officials in event of a lynching.

Davis' remarks about the President and Vice President, and his reference to Southern members of Congress as "stooges for the landlords and mill owners who degrade white womanhood by refusing to pay them a living wage," were stricken from the hearing record by Chairman Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana.

Van Nuys, himself a sponsor of antilynching legislation, warned the witness repeatedly against referring to members of Congress and threatened at one point to call Capitol police and have him taken away.

Van Nuys Warns Him

"You crashed the gates of this committee just to try and send out Communist propaganda," Van Nuys declared. "You have done more harm to prevent passage of this bill than anyone who has ever appeared."

Before Davis was allowed to testify, Van Nuys told other Senators that Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party, had insisted that Communist representatives be permitted to appear. The Senator added:

"I don't care a rap what Earl Browder or his whole party thinks of this or any other bill."

15 Minutes Allowed

Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, suggested that the Communist witness be granted 15 minutes and Senators Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Connally (Democrat), of Texas, nodded approval.

John P. Davis testified that during two months of last year "masked bands of the Ku Klux Klan rode with burning crosses through the Negro sections of Anderson and Greenville, S. C., 20 different times.

He said that a National Youth Administration camp at Lexington County, S. C., had been visited by scores of masked Klansmen and "Negro children terrorized." He added:

"Fred V. Johnson, head of the South Carolina Klan, makes his headquarters in the office of the sheriff."

Robert Lynch Made Counsel Of Dies Group

Former D. C. Counsel; Rhea Whitley Quits For 'Personal Affairs'

Robert E. Lynch, Washington attorney, has been appointed counsel to the Dies Committee, Chairman Dies announced yesterday.

Lynch replaces Rhea Whitley who, Dies said, has advised the committee "that he could not accept reappointment as counsel because of the press of personal affairs."

Dies stated that Lynch was chosen unanimously by "all seven" members of the committee, which is scheduled this spring to hold hearings on consumers' organizations and on allegedly subversive activities in Hollywood and on the West Coast.

A native of Washington and graduate of National University, Lynch was assistant District corporation counsel from 1928 to 1934, and since then has been associated in private practice here with William E. Leahy. When he quit District service, Lynch was highly praised by the Commissioners.

The Dies Committee pointed out that Lynch, "living in voteless Washington all his life," has had "no political activities nor affiliations."

Lynch, who is 44, followed up overseas participation in the World War as a naval aviator with service on the staff of Col. E. M. House at the Peace Conference. In 1919, he was secretary to the present American Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt, when the latter went on a special mission to Russia.

Chairman Dies plans to leave for Florida tonight to pursue several "tips" whose nature he would not disclose. He said he intends to visit Miami and probably two or three other cities.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Lawrence Tibbett in a song recital Tuesday evening in Constitution Hall. Assisting artist and accompanist: Stewart Wille.

So friendly and cordial was the mood of the auditors filling parterre, boxes, galleries and stage of Constitution Hall last evening at the recital of one of America's favorite barytones that one observer had the vivid impression thta a throng of loyal Tibbettans had assembled to welcome their beloved Friar Lawrence. Had they realized that he was singing under the handicap of a feverish cold, determined to go through his program rather than disappoint them, they would have been even more enthusiastic, and less impatient at the long intermission during which he was receiving the attention of physicians.

It was evident in Mr. Tibbett's first song that he was afflicted with hoarseness, and throughout the opening group his tones were occasionally veiled. As he proceeded, however, the voice gained in clarity, and there were few indications of impaired quality either in sonority or in refinements of tone. His excellent breath control and his crisp enunciation were his adjutants in the successful accomplishments of a recital which must have been for him nothing less than an ordeal. He was generous with extra songs, some of which were delivered with the informal bonhomie that endears him to his public.

He began with Lebell's arrangement of a florid aria, "Defend Her, Heaven," from Handel's "Theodora," and followed this taxing number with a setting by Edward Harris of "It Was a Lover and His Lass" and W. A. Aiken's interesting treatment of Shakespeare's eighteenth sonnet. In his second group, two of Erich Wolff's fine lieder, "Ewig" and "Du bist so jung," were incongruously juxtaposed with Wotan's farewell from "Die Walkuere." His encore for the group was the "Morgen" of Richard Strauss, intoned with lyric tenderness.

Despite his indisposition, Mr. Tibbett did not spare himself. After a dramatically forceful reading of Iago's credo from "Otello" he added for good measure "Di Provenza il mar." After the intermission came a group of unfamiliar songs, of which the loveliest was Michael Head's "Foxgloves," a bit of sheer magic in the evocation of poesy. Other items were Samuel Coleridge Taylor's "Eleanore," Albert Hay Malotte's "Among the Living" and Frank La Forge's "Hills."

In his closing group he presented Kay Kellogg's "Please Lord, Call Me Too" and David Guion's "De Lawd's Baptizin," an ingenious half-sung, half-spoken treatment of a colored preacher's sermon. Among his extra numbers were David Guion's "All Day on the Prairie" and Jacques Wolfe's "Shortenin' Bread."

Chicago's Jones Boys, Detroit Area Officials Hit Unlucky Numbers as U. S. Wars on Gaming

Alleged Racketeers Accused of Evading $1,000,000 in Taxes

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 5.—The policy wheel stopped on an unlucky number for the three affluent Jones brothers of Chicago's Harlem today when the Government charged them with evading more than $1,000,000 in income taxes.

The indictments, first in the policy field during the current investigation of incomes of alleged Chicago gambling kingpins, also accused Thomas R. Gilson, a lawyer and former Federal deputy collector of internal revenue, with aiding and abetting the Joneses in the alleged evasion.

Several hours later William R. Johnson, allegedly one of the top men in Chicago's gambling syndicate, surrendered at the Federal Building, was fingerprinted and posted $50,000 surety bond on an indictment returned Friday charging he owed the Government $2,232,497 in income taxes, penalties and interest. He made no statement.

Government agents said the three colored brothers, Edward P. Jones, McKissack McHenry Jones and George P. Jones, came from Mississippi 20 years ago, worked as railroad dining car waiters and then entered the policy game, profits of which rapidly pushed them up to a plane of "lavish living."

Agents said they cantered along park bridle paths garbed in the height of equestrian style, owned expensive automobiles and had chauffeurs, maintained a luxurious home and country estates. Edward, at least, frequently traveled to France where he would rent a villa at Cannes for the season, they related.

United States District Attorney William J. Campbell said the Jones' policy headquarters had a daily "take" of $10,000 to $15,000, gathered in bets from 1 cent up from some 60,000 policy players who hoped to win in three drawings a day.

All were named in each of three indictments, charging evasion and aiding and abetting one another. Gilson was accused of aiding and abetting each of the Joneses during three years he was a Federal employe and three years after he left Government service in 1936.

Detroit, March 5.—A grand jury investigating charges that law enforcement officers conspired with law breakers widened its scope today to bring Sheriff Thomas C. Wilcox into court as a defendant.

Wilcox, two of his aids and three other public officials were indicted and arraigned by Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson, sitting as a one-man grand jury and as magistrate, on charges of obstructing justice by accepting bribes to protect gamblers. Pleas of innocent were entered and examinations set for March 14.

The indictments named 39 other persons, said by Chester P. O'Hara, special prosecutor for the grand jury, to be gamblers, racketeers and keepers of disorderly houses, accused of conspiring to obstruct justice by paying protection money.

Named with Wilcox were Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea of Wayne county and his chief investigator, Harry Colburn, already indicted on charges of conspiring to operate and protect a baseball pool; Chief Deputy Sheriff Bernard E. McGrath, Carl J. Staebler, head of the civil division of the sheriff's office, and Alfred J. Garska, president of suburban Grosse Pointe Park.

Ouster proceedings against McCrea have been instituted by the State, with a hearing set for March 26. Tomorrow McCrea, Colburn and others face an examination on the baseball pool charge.

Today's indictments deal with alleged graft in Wayne County outside of Detroit.

McCrea, whose attempts to send a party of sheriff's deputies to the grand jury rooms last night resulted in a call for police riot squads and the placing of a strong police guard about the premises, renewed his efforts tonight to investigate charges that five men were beaten and mistreated by the jury's investigating staff.

In a letter to Judge Ferguson, McCrea asked that the complainants be permitted to view the investigators so they might try to identify the men they accused.

AFL-CIO Feud Is Ridiculed By Maverick

Some Labor Leaders Need Chloroforming, He Says in Address

The spectacle of A. F. of L. and C. I. O. members picketing each other is "the most monstrously idiotic thing going on in America today," Mayor Maury Maverick, of San Antonio, asserted last night.

Maverick, who was backed by the C. I. O. in an unsuccessful campaign to hold his House seat in 1938, advised "intelligent working people" to disregard their leaders whenever they are asked to fight another labor organization.

"Chloroforming a few labor leaders" might aid the cause of labor peace, the stocky Texas liberal suggested, "but the important thing is for us to recognize that labor unions are as much a part of democracy as business itself."

Maverick Condemns Dies

Maverick drew volleys of applause from an audience of 800 in the National Press Club as he condemned Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, for what he called exploitation of the fears of the American people.

"Men in high places live in horror" of persecution by the Dies Committee, Maverick charged. "Dies is the symbol and representative of the reactionary forces—a man of great power," he said.

Dies is "financially honest," Maverick remarked. "The fact that he may make money on lectures and magazine articles is nothing wrong.

"What I sadly deplore," Maverick continued, "is that Martin Dies does not give the same credit to Americans of equal patriotism. He is willing to smear men and women by the thousands, and in a manner strange to American ideals and constitutional practices.

The speaker offered as the "Maverick definition" of democracy:

"The right of every man to talk, pray, and think as he pleases, live in peace, and eat regular."

"Economics is whether you eat or not, and that is all," he said. "If you don't eat, you have no liberty." He warned "America's so-called better class" that its own possessions and liberties cannot be saved unless "economic democracy" is assured every American.

Maverick's address was sponsored by the Washington Chapter of the Descendants of the American Revolution. Speaking from the same platform were Senator James E. Murray (Democrat), of Montana; Representatives John M. Coffee (Democrat), of Washington; Kent Keller (Democrat), of Illinois; Vito Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, and Charles H. Houston, of the Association for the Advancement of the Colored People.

$193 Added to Blood Bank Fund By Legion Group, Mrs. Landreth

A check for $50 to help maintain the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank was presented to the hospital last night by Sergt. Jasper Unit, No. 13, American Legion Auxiliary, at a twenty-first anniversary meeting in the Raleigh Hotel.

The money, raised by unit members in cooperation with the blood bank campaign sponsored by The Washington Post and Station WJSV, was handed to Mrs. Imogene Gallagher, unit president, by Mrs. Edythe M. O'Connor, unit chairman of ways and means, and presented by Mrs. Gallagher to Robert Swope, second vice president of the hospital and president of the Southern Oxygen Co.

Another check—one for $143.68—was received yesterday from Mrs. Robert N. Landreth, of Falls Church, Va., for the blood and serum bank. The amount of the check was the total of a series of benefit bridges which Mrs. Landreth arranged in Falls Church and vicinity.

Other receipts yesterday included an additional $36 from the Washington Bridge League, cosponsor of the campaign and lesser amounts from the American Legion auxiliary units of the Government Printing Office, Stephen P. McGroarty and Gen. U. G. McAlexander posts.

Not only will net proceeds of the Connecticut Avenue Association fashion show to be held at the Hotel Mayflower Hotel next Monday be turned over to the blood bank fund, but also the fees received for "dance analyses" which will be made at the show by the Arthur Murray Dance Studios of Washington, it was announced.

Ethel M. Fistere, studio director, said dance analysis tickets will sell for 50 cents, the entire amount going to the fund. She also announced a bonus for the instructor selling the most tickets.

U. S. Air Travel Shows 70 Pct. Rise in Year

Domestic airlines carried 69.62 per cent more revenue passengers in January, 1940, than in January, 1939, the Civil Aeronautics Authority announced yesterday.

Reports from 17 lines showed 138,282 passengers carried in the month, and 817,633 pounds of air express. Express poundage had increased 41.46 per cent over the same month last year.

Mr. Roosevelt Will Talk— To Census Man

President Parries 3d Term Questions, Silent About Hull

been called on the phone about it, he said, by his friend, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

Byrnes, he said, urged him to read the article as everyone at the Capitol was "kidding" Senator Ellison D. "Cotton Ed" Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, about being the elderly stalwart in whom he confided. This brought a laugh from reporters. Smith is a bitter anti-New Dealer and is one of the three Senate Democrats the President sought to "purge" in the 1938 elections.

A reporter observed that the veteran Representative Doughton, (Democrat), of North Carolina, was being widely identified as the man in whom the President had confided. The reporter said Doughton denied relaying such information to anyone.

"Did you discuss the third term question with Bob Doughton?" the President was asked.

Mr. Roosevelt replied he did not remember talking with Representative Doughton about that.

Representative Doughton denied he provided the information for the Lindley article, and likewise denied any knowledge of the Farley allusion in the Lindley column.

By actual count, 175 newspaper correspondents faced the President. Tanned and refreshed, he received reporters for the first time since returning from his 4,000-mile southern cruise. Never had he been subjected to a more searching barrage of political queries, and he seemed not to mind. But he added zero to the political knowledge of his interlocutors. Most other queries met the same fate as the third-term feelers.

A reporter wanted to know whether he favored Senator Guffey, Pennsylvania's 100-per cent New Dealer, or Walter Jones, wealthy Pittsburgh Democrat who has filed against Guffey in the Keystone State primaries. To such questions the President replied he had been back too short a time to know what was transpiring in Pennsylvania or elsewhere, adding jocularly that he didn't know nothing.

But in answer to one question, he took time out to praise Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, as a good public servant and to express hope Donahey would run again either for reelection to the Senate or for Governor of Ohio. Donahey, who declined to run for the "favorite son" spot in Ohio's Presidential preference because it would make him a third-term "stalking horse," recently announced he will retire from the Senate.

In another of the recent series of conciliatory gestures to the Democratic Party's conservative right, President Roosevelt meanwhile extended an olive branch to Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, whom he unsuccessfully sought to eliminate from the Senate in 1938.

He sent to the Capitol the nomination of Henry P. Walthour, of Savannah, for another term as United States marshal for Georgia's southern district. George officially recommended Walthour for the job, but the nomination had been held up. It was the first White House patronage extended the Georgian since the 1938 purge, although recently the President had nominated Marshal Cox for United States marshal of the State's northern district. George had supported Senator Russell's recommendation of Cox. The President has yet to act on George's sponsorship of Howell Cone for collector of the port of Savannah.

Talks With Rivers

But while Walthour's nomination was on the way to the Capitol, the President was chatting at the White House with Gov. E. D. Rivers of Georgia, factional opponent of the Georgia Senator. Rivers said he came to ask the President to attend the dedication of the State's new mental hospital at Milledgeville.

Rivers predicted to reporters that Georgia's 24 delegate votes would go to the President if he wants them at the Democratic convention, but said no decision on a State wide primary will be reached until the State Democratic committee meets. Senator George has joined Vice President Garner in urging a Georgia primary, in which the Vice President would file. Rivers reputedly is opposed. He cited Mr. Roosevelt's recent overwhelming sweep of the sample Seminole County, Ga., poll as evidence of his State's support of Roosevelt.

Also messaged to the Senate yesday was the President's nomination of Herbert F. Goodrich, University of Pennsylvania Law School dean, to be judge of the Third United States Circuit Court. Senator Guffey, author of the third-term promoting booklet, "Roosevelt Again," has favored John H. McCann, Cambria County judge, for the post.

LOST 26 LBS. of FAT

Fat Girls—Here's A Tip!

NEW YORK—Special.

In 40 days Mrs. Helga Blaugh reduced 26 lbs. Took 4 inches off hips, 3 inches off bust and 7½ inches off waist. She writes: "I feel fine and look 10 years younger."

How would you like to safely and harmlessly lose 15 pounds of fat in a few weeks? How would you like to lose your double chin and your bulging hips and stomach and along with it get the increase in energy and improvement in health which so often accompanies excess fat reduction?

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh. Take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water first thing every morning to gently activate liver, bowels and kidneys. Cut down your caloric intake. Eat wisely and satisfyingly.

Then after 30 days, weigh yourself again and just see if you haven't lost pounds of ugly fat. Money back if not joyfully satisfied.

Refuse imitations. Demand and get the genuine Kruschen made right here in the U. S. A. A jar lasts 4 weeks and costs but a trifle. Adv.

occasionally, members of Congress.

"I've been a member of the House for six years," barked Nichols, "and I never have known a member of this House to have a policeman assigned to a social function."

Mondell replied that maybe it was only the Senators who demanded such service.

A hint the suffrage cause is lost for this session at least came from Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, during an exchange with Wender.

Reiterating a suggestion that reorganization and suffrage be handled separately, Dirksen said he is certain that "no agreement can be reached on the House floor" on a bill carrying both proposals.

Dirksen said it would be a simple procedure to convert an appointive advisory council into an elective body if and when Congress should decide to give the citizens of Washington the right to vote.

He warned suffrage proponents that Congress would adjourn about June 1 and that the reorganization bill has a long legislative path to travel if any reform is to be effected by the present Congress.

Mondell Is Challenged

Mondell's statement that the District, under its present form of government, "has become a place more dangerous to life, limb, health and property than any other city in the United States" brought an immediate challenge from members of the sub-committee.

In support of his statement, Mondell read at length from an article, "Washington: A National Disgrace," by Merlo J. Pusey, of the editorial staff of The Washington Post, in the December Forum magazine. He also cited figures compiled by the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

"I do not attribute the existence of the present evils in our government to its personnel," Mondell said. "The fault rather is with the system."

Representative George Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, challenged Mondell's subsequent statement that Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, is not responsible for the fact that many policemen "play tag with parked cars" while a minor crime wave progresses.

Nichols Commends City

Bates insisted that any official must be held responsible for the operation of his department, regardless of the form of government.

Nichols commented that the District has "a very fine system" of government which "works speedily" by short-cut methods.

Also disagreeing with the witness, Dirksen expressed the opinion that the District government under Congressional control has both flexibility and adequacy.

Mondell explained to the subcommittee that the District Suffrage Association was not asking Congress to relinquish its control of the municipal government.

"We not only realize the constitutional impossibility of the Congress divesting itself of control of the City of Washington," he said, "but we also recognize the impropriety of Congress abandoning its supervision of the Nation's Capital.

"The citizens of Washington request only that the Congress establish here an elective body with concurrent legislative authority which, subject at all times to the right of veto of the Congress, will have power to legislate concerning the purely municipal affairs of the District of Columbia."

Wender to Resume Today

Wender, who will resume his testimony today, attacked the advisory council of the Seal reorganization bill. He was asked by committee members about the operations of the Traffic Advisory Council, of which he is a member.

"Are you afraid of the Commissioners as a member of this appointed council?" asked Nichols.

"I don't give a damn whether they kick me off or not," shouted Wender.

Wender also assailed the provision for replacing the health officer ultimately by an appointee of the United States Public Health Service and complained that no District official had ever explained the origin of the move to oust Dr. George C. Ruhland.

The District Communist Party last night issued a statement and leaflet attacking Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and other members of the board "with reckless disregard for the vital needs of the citizens of Washington."

Oil Producers Fight Treaty Excise Change

Domestic Industry 'Kept in Dark' During Negotiation of Pact

By the Associated Press

The Senate Finance Committee was told yesterday that the State Department broke faith with Congress when the excise tax on imported oil was reduced by 50 per cent in a trade agreement with Venezuela.

Russell B. Brown, general counsel of the Independent Petroleum Association, asserted that domestic oil producers were kept "completely in the dark" while the agreement was being negotiated. They were denied the right to argue the point that the department had no authority to cut excise taxes, he said, because of promises made in Congress when the reciprocal trade agreements act was passed.

"The State Department," Brown testified, "has made what constitutes a technical legal defense of its action but has made no frank statement to justify an administrative agency in what appears to be a breach of good faith with the Congress from which it receives its power."

Vandenberg Backs Stand

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said he thought there could "be no doubt about the record on that score."

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, asserted, however, that if he believed there was anything in the Trade Agreements Act precluding a change in excise taxes when agreements were negotiated, he never would have voted for it.

Pending legislation, against which Brown argued, would extend the trade agreements program for three years.

Charles W. Holman, Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, contended that the United States lost $70,420,000 in duties in 1938 through operation of the reciprocal trade program.

Glass Industry Opposed

V. L. Mouro, president of the American Window Glass Co., opposed continuation of the trade agreements. He asserted that American window glass workers received 64 cents an hour, compared with 14¾ cents an hour paid similar workers in Belgium, chief competitor.

Jack Arnold, Birney, Mont., rancher, urged that Senate ratification of the trade agreements be required.

W. M. Thatcher, of St. Paul, president of the National Federation of Grain Cooperatives, said his organization supported the principle of the trade agreements as being most likely to bring international cooperation and peace, but believed that precautions should be taken to protect parity prices for farm products.

AFL Building Leaders Charge Arnold's Trust Drive Aids CIO

Union Official Declares 'Not One' Attending Meeting Could Stay Out of Jail, If Campaign Is Allowed to Continue

By International News Service

Building trades union leaders of the American Federation of Labor yesterday charged Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold's antitrust drive in the construction industry was motivated to promote the rival Congress of Industrial Organizations union.

The union men ended a two-day conference here by voting opposition to amendments to the antitrust laws proposed by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming. They held that the amendments would bring labor unions definitely under the antitrust statutes.

Patrick J. Sullivan, president of the Chicago Building Trades Council, told 500 delegates from 485 A. F. of L. building trades councils the "trust-busting" Assisting Attorney General was "invading the constitutional rights of union workmen" in the campaign.

"I dare say there isn't a man in this room who isn't going to jail for some infraction of the antitrust law if Arnold isn't stopped," Sullivan said. "We have the right to oppose use of nonunion materials and nonunion labor in the construction industry, but the Government says these practices are illegal."

Frank McDonald, of San Francisco, president of the California Buildings Trades Council, declared union labor is "not a commodity in commerce," and therefore is not subject to antitrust laws.

"Political reasons are behind Arnold's investigation," he said. "We workmen want to know just what the law is. We do not want it defined by an 'Arnold,' but by a competent court."

He charged Arnold's assertions that building costs would be lowered as a result of the Department of Justice campaign was "propaganda" and would prevent the labor unions from getting a "square deal and a square hearing" from juries in their trials.

Labor Seeks Vote of Censure On Palestine

New Land Laws Arouse Commons as Rioting Spreads in Jerusalem

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), March 6 Great Britain's newest restrictions on Palestine's Jews today precipitated a demand from the labor opposition in the House of Commons for a vote of censure against the government—the first of the war.

Debate later today on drastic restrictions promulgated on sale of land by Arabs to Jews threatened to cut the government majority to an abnormally small figure. It was recalled that the government margin was only 88 votes last May 17 in favor of adoption of a white paper which declared it was not part of British policy that "Palestine should become a Jewish state."

Story of Rioting Grows

The vote of censure will be moved by Laborite Philip Noel-Baker when he opens the debate on the new land restrictions in Commons this afternoon. He will ask the House to vote that the government acted without authority of the League of Nations and that the regulations discriminate unjustly against one section of the Holy Land's inhabitants (the Jews).

The Daily Herald said Jewish demonstrations against the land laws in Palestine March 2 were "much more serious than first reported" and that 18,000 persons participated at Tel Aviv alone.

Injured included 150 demonstrators and a score of police who charged into the crowds with flailing batons and opened fire in an ensuing melee in which the officers were stoned, the newspaper said.

"Finally mounted troops entered the city with sabers drawn," it added.

"At Haifa the crowds tried to burn the law court. Another demonstration by workmen was broken up by troops in full battle kit and police who made baton charges."

U. S. Reaction Feared

The land sale regulations, announced February 28 and made retroactive to May 18, 1939, were explained by Colonial Secretary MacDonald as "urgently" necessary because of a "delicate" situation.

The most popular unofficial explanation here has been that Great Britain is courting stronger support of the Moslem world.

Official spokesmen, however, insisted the rights and position of Arabs would be prejudiced unless land sales to Jews were prohibited in some areas and strictly regulated in others. It was contended that Jews, fortified with cash from coreligionists from all over the world, could pay more than the actual value of land to the Arabs and still make a profit because of their farming skill.

Opposition members of Parliament, on the other hand, foresaw that the land restrictions could be construed to Great Britain's detriment abroad as an instance of how she might be prepared to set aside an obligation if she thought it necessary in the imperial interest.

They expressed fear the action would produce the worst possible impression, for instance, in the United States.

Jerusalem, March 5 (AP).—Stones flew in strategic, long-troubled Jerusalem today and one British constable was injured as police broke up fresh Jewish demonstrations against new British laws restricting transfer of land from Arabs to Jews.

Police imposed a curfew from 3:30 p. m. to 1 a. m. on the Jewish quarters of Jerusalem. A curfew beginning at 5 p. m. has been clamped on the Jewish city of Tel Aviv.

(In Rome, a reliable informant from Jerusalem gave an uncensored account of demonstrations late last month in Palestine. He said the largest disturbance was at Tel Aviv, where cavalry charged the crowd with drawn swords. About 140 Jews and scores of police were hurt. More than 15,000 Jews took part in the Tel Aviv protest, he said.

Vital War Sector

(Other disturbances occurred in Jerusalem and Haifa, the Rome informant said. About 45 Jews and 16 police were hurt in Jerusalem, and 90 Jews were reported hurt in Haifa when police stopped an attempt to burn a courthouse.)

Pope Appeals to Rumanians To Join the Roman Church

Pontiff Recalls Nation Was Settled By Legions of Empire; Hungary Looks Askance at Possible Loss of Vatican Favor

By Camille M. Cianfarra.

Copyright by New York Times

Vatican City, March 5.—A cautiously worded appeal to Rumanian members of the Greek Orthodox Church to rejoin the Roman Catholic Church was contained in the speech published today which Pope Pius XII delivered to the Rumanian bishops yesterday.

The pontiff said that only through the Catholic religion, which is "universal," could the Rumanians achieve internal unity and avoid internecine strife. He also recalled the Roman origin of the Rumanian people—the descendants of the Roman legionaries who settled in Rumania during Trajan's reign—and said that in the footsteps of the legionaries came the Catholic missionaries who "instilled the Christian virtues and the ancient law of civilization both of which they embodied in the Roman faith."

The speech, which is regarded as having somewhat acknowledged overtures recently made to the Vatican by Rumanian leaders, will doubtless increase the uneasiness which is understood to be felt by the Hungarians over the reported Rumanian movement for reunion to the Catholic Church, according to some Vatican circles.

The Hungarian viewpoint, it is stressed, is that so long as Rumania is outside the Catholic Church, Hungary, one of the most Catholic nations in Europe, can count on the Pope's support when the time comes for her to demand the satisfaction of her claims from Rumania.

It is pointed out in Vatican circles, however, that despite this outward display of cordiality between Rumania and the Vatican, no sensational development is expected in the near future. Owing to the difficult situation in which she finds herself as a result of the European conflict, it is said Rumania has decided to improve her relations with the Holy See, so as to strengthen her internal unity.

Wholesale Liquor Quiz Here Hinted

witness told the sub-committee he could not identify them.

Earlier John C. McGahey, of the Washington Class C Liquor Dealers Association, told the sub-committee that more police inspectors should be assigned to aid the ABC board in keeping check on licensees.

He also protested the use of "rookie" policemen for this service. Inspectors fresh out of training school often are "over-zealous" in making arrests for minor infractions, he said.

Schulte interrupted McGahey's testimony to complain that Petworth, residents had "denounced" him for his stand in the liquor investigation.

"We are all good churchgoing people," he said. "Just recently I was in church and heard a priest say that the Lord attended a wedding feast and when He found they were short of wine He wrought a miracle and changed the water into wine."

If He did that today, Schulte added, He "would certainly get in bad" with Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the ABC Board.

Subsequently Schulte observed that he had visited Mount Vernon recently and noted that there are a number of old wine bottles there.

"George Washington would certainly be in bad shape if he lived in Petworth today," he said. "They probably would burn his house down."

Nazis Execute 136 Children, Poles Charge

Thousands Killed In Reign of Terror, Emigre Regime Says

By the Associated Press

Paris, March 5.—The Polish emigre government, in an advance resume of data which are to go into a "white book," tonight accused the German conquerors of executing schoolboys, men and women en masse as part of a deliberate campaign to exterminate the native population of Poland.

(The German government previously has denied Polish charges of mass executions in the occupied regions.)

The official communique cited a long list of alleged atrocities and called them "worthy of the worst tyrants of antiquity."

Among the crimes the emigre government said had been committed were:

6,000 Adults Executed

The shooting at Bydgoszcz of 136 Polish schoolboys, 12 and 13 years old.

"Massacre" at the same place up to the end of December of 6,000 Polish men and women.

Deportation from Gdynia of 350 Polish hostages and their execution, after they were forced to dig their own graves. Among those executed were listed the burgomaster, the port superintendent, chief judge of the district court and the manager of the Bank of Poland branch.

The Polish government also declared the Germans had installed machine guns in choir lofts in some churches to terrorize the congregations.

Statue Thrown Into Fire

Citing alleged instances of interference with religious services and the closing of churches, the Poles charged a statue of Christ in one case was taken from a church and cast into a bonfire.

Wayside crosses and chapels have been removed in many places throughout western Poland, it was alleged.

The monument to the Polish hero, Kosciuszko, and the statue of Woodrow Wilson at Poznan, have been demolished, tonight's paper asserted.

The execution of "increasingly large numbers of women," the slaying of a total of 18,000 Poles, "leaders in all social classes," and the deportation to central Poland of the entire Polish population of Gdynia, numbering 130,000, were other charges contained in the advance resume.

Youthful Diva Will Sing Here

MARJORIE LAWRENCE

It was a case of the little lady having a busy day yesterday when Marjorie Lawrence, youngest prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera, flew into Washington to rehearse her scheduled appearance with the National Symphony Orchestra at Constitution Hall tonight, and departed 45 minutes later.

She left New York by plane at 7 a. m., arrived here at 10:30 a. m., dashed to Constitution Hall, completed her number and then boarded a train for Baltimore, where she appeared last night with the National Symphony. She had sung in New York Monday night.

Her reddish-brown hair, hazel eyes and charming manner captured the fancy of all who saw her, just as her remarkable soprano voice has captured the hearts of music lovers of two continents.

Miss Lawrence is 26 and has been singing in public seven years. She is a native of Australia and made her debut at the Monte Carlo Opera, singing Elisabeth in "Tannhauser."

Roosevelt Receives New Envoy

By the Associated Press

Australia opened formal diplomatic relations with the United States yesterday when the Australian Minister, Richard G. Casey, presented his credentials to President Roosevelt.

A brief ceremony signalized what the handsome, black-mustached Minister described as "the stretching of the hands of friendship between your country and ours across the Pacific."

The presentation of credentials established relations with the third British dominion to be represented in Washington; the others are Canada and British South Africa.

Minister Casey told the President he was "commanded by His Majesty (King George VI of England) to convey to you his hope that the appointment of a Minister especially charged with representing Australian affairs will tend to strengthen still further the friendly relations between the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations."

"The Australian government," he added, "believes that the creation of this new link across the Pacific should be instrumental in further advancing the friendship between our two countries, which is already well founded on the bases of mutual interest, common political ideals and similar ways of life."

The President assured the new Minister of the desire of the American Government to give him "its most earnest cooperation."

Export-Import Fund Increase Two-Thirds Allocated Already

By the Associated Press

Reliable reports have reached the Administration that a number of Latin-American visitors may be expected soon to seek part of the $100,000,000 credits authorized for the Export-Import Bank.

The first visitor probably will be the President-elect of Costa Rica Rafael Calderon Guardia. Since Costa Rica occupies a strategic position for the defense of the Panama Canal, she stands a good chance of getting a portion of the credits.

A representative of Chile may come to the United States to take up a $5,000,000 credit already allocated to his country but not actually handed over. He will submit a list of the projects for which the credit is to be expended.

Colombia is reported seeking from $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 for railroad and public road developments.

Panama wants payment of a credit granted to construct a transisthmian highway.

Brazil is reported considering asking for payment of credits granted her last year during the visit of Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian foreign minister.

All indications point to the probability that the Latin-American representatives will find much less money available than might have been expected. Countries in other parts of the world will have got in ahead of them.

Finland is scheduled to receive $20,000,000 of the credit; China, $20,000,000; Norway, $10,000,000, and Sweden, $15,000,000.

That will leave only $35,000,000 of the additional $100,000,000 voted by Congress last week.

Last year credits were granted by the Export-Import Bank to Paraguay, Brazil and Nicaragua. Uruguay was granted a credit, but did not take it up. About $100,000 was allocated to Argentina for the purchase of railroad equipment.

Latin-American nations wishing to obtain credits submit a description of the projects contemplated and bank officials try to determine whether they will be self-sustaining either in the sense of producing revenue or of adding to the wealth of the borrowing country.

alternative market, the supply should now be cut.

As evidence that the decision is directed against the Nazis and not against the Italians, the British point out that credits are now available through which Italy can increase her present purchases of coal in this country.

Italian officials in London were saying today that since Great Britain decided to interrupt Italian shipments of German coal, the least they could do was to ship coal to Rome in exchange for the kind of produce by which Italy had been paying Germany for it—agricultural produce.

This the British refuse to do because while they do not mind accepting large quantities of Italian agricultural produce, they have already contracted to take large quantities of the same produce from Turkey and Greece.

On the whole, British officials are calm about the question.

Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, announced in Commons today that Britain's first big war loan, amounting to £300,000,000 ($1,200,000,000), would be issued next Tuesday at par, bearing 3 per cent interest. The loan will extend for a period of from 15 to 19 years, the treasury reserving the right to redeem the bonds at par, on or after October 15, 1955.

Books for subscription to the issue will be closed March 13.

Up to now, Great Britain has financed the war by short term borrowing, £100,000,000 having been raised through federal savings certificates, defense bonds, increased taxes imposed last September, and by an increase in the floating debt amount £300,000,000.

The announcement of the new longer-term loan, the biggest in 20 years, therefore, was not expected.

Neutrals Warned

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, March 5.—In its highly organized campaign to promote British export trade in order to pay for imported war materials, the British government will not attempt to monopolize world markets, but warns neutral customers, including the United States, that "if you want us to go on buying your goods, rather than someone else's, you must help us by buying our goods in return."

This declaration made today to British and foreign correspondents by Robert S. Hudson, secretary of the department of overseas trade, followed publication of an official white paper which, in explaining the aims of the recently created export council, stated: "Should exceptional circumstances arises in particular trades or over the whole field, the council place no limits to the expedients they would be prepared to consider" to spur British exports.

way and several Latin-American nations, it is said. Finland too has tried to buy some of the guns, but is barred because engaged in hostilities.

Included in the War Department list for sale were:

One hundred thousand Enfield shoulder rifles, out of some 1,700,000 weapons of this make now in storage..

More than 70,000 .30-caliber machine guns, mostly designed for use in planes, including Lewis, Marlin and Vickers types.

About 300 75-millimeter field guns of British design.

More than 250 8-inch howitzers made in Great Britain, together with a limited amount of ammunition.

Approximately 25 heavy siege guns.

More than 200 3-inch Stokes mortars and upwards of 100,000 shells.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt called in Congressional leaders to urge they provide funds this year for an emergency bomb-proof set of locks for the Panama Canal, and branded as fake, reports he had sought territory in Costa Rica, Panama and Colombia for auxiliary air bases to help defend the Isthmus.

Acquisition of additional territory for bases is not only unnecessary but would be a silly move for the United States, the President told his press conference, his first since returning from an inspection of the Canal defenses.

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, majority floor leader, said after a White House conference attended by Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead and House Majority Leader Rayburn, that the $15,000,000 for starting the Panama locks, cut out by the House, will be restored if a survey proves that work can start immediately.

Brazil Gets 6-Inch Guns

Funds for starting the locks were eliminated in the House on the contention that plans are incomplete and that work can not be started for two years.

Sale of the surplus 6-inch guns to Brazil was hailed as the first concrete move to carry out the new policy of unified hemisphere defense. The guns are of British make and were acquired just after the World War. They have been in storage at the Aberdeen, Md., Proving Ground.

Secretary Woodring, in explaining why the guns are considered surplus, said the United States Army has since adopted a 155 millimeter gun as its standard heavy field piece and that the use of the 6-inch weapon would require special shells, complicating supply and maintenance problems.

The price of the guns was not disclosed, nor that put on other surplus munitions. It was understood the general policy is to ask less than a third of the original cost.

Meanwhile the Navy awarded a $35,980,000 contract for construction of the 10,000-ton cruisers Columbia and Cleveland, to the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, Camden, N. J. The vessels will mount six-inch guns and will be similar to the St. Louis class.

U. S. Loses Suit Against 18 Rubber Firms

Case Is Dismissed On Interpretation Of Word 'Person'

By the Associated Press

New York, March 5.—Federal Judge Conger today dismissed the Government's $1,053,474.63 triple-damage suit against 18 leading tire and rubber companies which it had accused of violating the Sherman antitrust law by conspiring to fix the prices of tires.

In ruling on a motion for dismissal, Judge Conger declared the Government could bring injunction proceedings or institute criminal proceedings against the alleged offenders. The suit was filed in February, 1939.

Judge Conger observed that this was the first action brought by the Government under Section 7, which provides that "any person who shall be injured in his business or property by any other person or corporation by reason of anything forbidden or declared unlawful" in the act shall be entitled to triple damages.

The Government's suit was based on alleged losses of $351,158.21 which the Government contended it lost between October 1, 1936, and September 30, 1937, when it bought tires. Because of a conspiracy between the defendants, the suit alleged, prices were higher than they should have been. On four occasions, it was charged, bids of the different companies were "identical to the penny."

tivities "against enemy troops and military objectives," did not mention progress of troops reported Tuesday to have gained a foothold on the western shore of Viipuri Bay.

(The Russian report on Tuesday's fight, however, reported capture of Neetela, 9 miles northeast of Viipuri. The Russians also claimed capture of two more islands in the bay, one just north of the Koivisto fortresses taken some days ago.

(The Red communique, like those of Tuesday and Monday, reported "nothing important" on other fronts, although the Finns said Monday's fighting brought them a minor victory in the Kuhmo sector, midway of the frontier.)

Some Russian troops were drowned and several tanks sunk in huge fissures of the ice of Viipuri Bay, opened when bombs and artillery fired on the attackers coming west in an attempt to encircle the city, unofficial Finnish reports said of Tuesday's fighting.

The Finnish high command said fighting still was in progress among the rugged inlets at the mouth of the bay, and the Finnish flag still waved from Viipuri's historic castle.

An official communique on the Russian bombing attacks said "the enemy pilots' brutal bombing of hospitals and helpless patients continues.

"On Tuesday, bombing was, if possible, more raw and brutal than ever before. Altogether three hospitals were bombed during the day. In one hospital more than ten patients were killed and in another at least four.

"Many patients were wounded during these raids.

"Also the bombing of civilians caused many casualties. Bombs were dropped, among other places, on Mikkeli, where many people were killed and wounded; also Kuopio and Lahti. In both of these towns, according to reports so far, four people were killed and many wounded. In southwestern Finland bombs were dropped on Forssa. Enemy pilots opened machine-gun fire against a passenger train."

Immediate objectives of the Russian attacks outside Viipuri appeared to be Virolahti and Haapasaari Islands, for starting general operations along Finland's southern coast.

Md. U. Student Found in Army In Canada

DEWITT SMITH, Jr.

Missing Bethesda Youth Writes He Fights for 'Decency'

The mysterious disappearance of DeWitt C. Smith, jr., 19-year-old Maryland University student, of Bethesda, on January 10, was explained yesterday by his letter telling his parents he had enlisted in the Canadian army "to fight for democracy and decency in the world."

The letter started his father, director of domestic operations of the American Red Cross, to Windsor, Ontario, yesterday to talk matters over with him. Mrs. Smith said she would probably go to see the boy later if he remained in Canada.

The letter, received Monday, said he had enlisted in the Essex Scottish Regiment under the name of "John Hare." A dispatch from Windsor yesterday said he signed up with a group of recruits on January 15, giving his age as 22.

The letter was the first word which his parents had had from him since his disappearance. He had given his fraternity brothers an inkling of his venture, for he had been heard to say that he would like to join the Canadian army, just before he disappeared. The boy, a freshman, was pledged to Phi Delta Theta fraternity. The Smith home is at 5501 Edgemoor Lane, Bethesda, Md.

Police and Federal authorities had been looking for him since his disappearance.

Dowell Served 23 Years

The Republican nominee is a son of W. J. Goodwin, Des Moines banker, and a regional chairman on Glenn Frank's Republican program committee. Allen, who has been elected to the Iowa Legislature both as an independent and a Republican, joined the Democratic Party in 1936.

Except for one term, Dowell served a quarter century in the lower House. Two years ago he defeated his Democratic opponent, 53,505 to 37,056.

Nazis Disown Wish to Take Rule of Seas

Germany Fighting Against British Misuse, Paper Says

By C. Brooks Peters.

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, March 5.—An indication that Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles was assured the Reich's determination to destroy British domination of the seas was not a threat to the United States, is furnished tonight by a leading article tonight in the Boersen Zeitung, frequently the mouthpiece for the foreign office.

According to this comment, which bears all the earmarks of official inspiration, Germany's aim is the destruction of the British power to prevent a free world trade. Nazi aims are alleged to be directed chiefly toward a hegemony in central Europe, "which does not necessarily mean the destruction of the British and French empires."

Germany, the writer states, is not waging war against Great Britain's legitimate interests on the seas but only against her misuse of them. Thus it is argued "Germany obviously has no intention of substituting German domination of the seas for British control.

"Fighting for Freedom"

"Whatever may be the methods with which the Reich wages its defensive war against British aggression, their origin remains defense and destruction of the British terror and the will to destroy. Germany is thus fighting for the freedom of seas . . .

The American press, in propagating rumors of alleged German intention to dominate the seas, is flying in the face of reality, it is stated.

"Here developments are being prophesied which move from the east to the west, from the European continent to America; actually, however, the process in which Germany is now engaged, moves historically, as well as geographically, in the opposite direction. Today, the true meaning of German revolution lies in concentration to Central Europe.

"If the United States, however, seriously desires that Great Britain comes out from this war still in a position to continue her role in the maintenance of the world political equilibrium, as America understands it, then Germany has the right to ask: What can the United States, on their part, do to insure that England never again will misuse its seapower to destroy the freedom of the seas, to trample on the rights of nations, threaten other countries with hunger, poverty and economic famine?"

Lenten Service By Dr. Sizoo Packs Church

Dr. Phillips Forced To Sit on Balcony Floor to Hear Sermon

Packing Epiphany Episcopal Church for noonday Lenten rites, 1,400 worshipers yesterday heard Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo warn that the Christian Church must be intelligent if its message is to be effective today.

Former pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, from which many members were present, Dr. Sizoo said the Christian Church is weak and paralyzed because it has failed to think clearly and to take a definite stand on issues. The world has no use for a church with its "tongue in its cheek," he remarked.

Arriving for the services following his duties as Senate chaplain, Dr. Ze Barney Phillips was compelled to sit on the floor of the balcony of his own church to hear Dr. Sizoo, now pastor of St. Nicholas' Collegiate Church, New York City. Not a seat was available, many persons were turned away and hundreds were in their places a half-hour before the opening hymn was sung.

The clergyman offered a prayer following his talk. He is speaking daily through Friday at 12:05 p. m. The Rev. Duncan Fraser, Epiphany assistant pastor, presided.

Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, will preach from the same pulpit at 4:45 p. m. today at the weekly union Lenten services sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches.

Dr. William S. Abernethy, Calvary Baptist pastor and president of the Washington Ministerial Union, addressed yesterday's daily rites of Southeast Protestant Churches at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington District, Baltimore Conference, Methodist Church, will preach at noon today. The North Carolina Avenue Methodist congregation is in charge of this week's services. The Rev. Bernard I. Barnes is pastor.

30,000 Plants Transferred to Greenbelt, Mall Greenhouses Are Being Wrecked

Growths Are Moved To Luxury Quarters Without a Loss

WPA workers began demolishing the Agriculture Department greenhouses in the Mall, one of the Capital's most familiar landmarks, yesterday.

As the wreckers wielded their picks and sledges, an elderly outsider came into their midst. He walked up to the foreman and said, dabbing his eyes with a handkerchief.

"For 7 years I worked here and in the old nursery which stood to the south before these hothouses were put up. I sort of hate to see them come down."

Even as the WPA laborers were leveling the antiquated conservatories on Constitution avenue, between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets, the ultra-modern greenhouses at Beltsville, Md., which replaced them, were already abloom with carnations, cineraria and roses.

The transfer was accomplished last fall, some 30,000 plants of hundreds of varieties and species being hauled by truck to their new quarters at the Agriculture Department's Beltsville horticultural station. Only this week, however, was the task begun of razing the old flower plant in the Mall, whose site eventually is expected to be used for a Government building.

The Mall greenhouses, erected in 1902, were condemned as eyesores but twice a year—at the amaryllis show in the spring and the chrysanthemum show in the fall—they attracted thousands of visitors. Every First Lady since Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt had attended the exhibition previews.

Whether the flower show will be continued at the new greenhouses has not been decided.

The Beltsville plant is composed of five glass houses, each 310 feet long and 40 feet wide, and a 194-foot conservatory, which has two wings each 85 feet in length. According to J. H. Beattie, senior horticulturist at Beltsville, and J. W. Byrnes, associate floriculturist in charge of the experimental greenhouses, the new nursery's modern equipment and improved lighting will permit far better research than was possible at the old quarters in the Mall.

Byrnes is the third man to direct the department's flower investigations since the original "division of gardens" was established during the Civil War. The second was his father, E. M. Byrnes, whom he succeeded in 1924. The younger Byrnes was employed at the United States Botanic Garden before coming to the Agriculture Department in 1906.

The navel orange is one of the many fruits and flowers which were introduced to the United States by way of the department's experimental greenhouses. It made its North American debut in 1870, when the division of gardens was located where the Agriculture Department's administration building now stands.

Beattie and Byrnes are rather proud that the plants were moved by truck from the Mall to Beltsville without a single loss. They were particularly careful of the 7,000 chrysanthemum plants, which comprised 85 truckloads. The hundreds of other species transferred ranged from hardy cactus and tropical palms to delicate rosebushes and gardenias.

The Mall greenhouses numbered 31, compared with six at Beltsville, but the latter will accommodate as many specimens, if not more, because of their greater size.

Hopkins Aide Urges 5-Day Week

By Alfred Friendly

The five-day week for all Federal workers was urged in a statement yesterday by Malcolm Kerlin, administrative assistant to Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, that was distributed to department employes.

Kerlin's advocacy of the shorter work week first was made in an address to the Society for Personnel Management. It carries more than passing importance owing to Kerlin's reputation as one of the Government's most gifted and successful administrators.

Kerlin said that for several reasons "this was not the proper time" for putting a five-day week into effect, but that more attention must be focused on the proposal.

"Why should the Government hold back in this progressive step?" Kerlin asked his fellow administrators. "Why should we leave it to the personnel to advocate and to push? When the time is proper we should be in the vanguard urging it."

Sees Increased Efficiency

Kerlin said that 15 years ago he had advocated a full day closing on Saturday, arguing that "increased efficiency would result and that the total weekly output would not be lessened."

"Nothing has occurred in the meantime to cause me to change my mind, but things have happened which have strengthened my views," he said.

In forthright words, Kerlin also placed the responsibility for much "unnecessary" time spent on employe grievances at the feet of Federal supervisory personnel who were not functioning properly in their duties.

"They have been neglectful of the interests of their employes or they have not been frank with them, and consequently the employes have felt themselves compelled to seek redress from the higher officials," Kerlin charged.

"It is my firm conviction that we should anticipate the interests of the employes and endeavor to adjust them without waiting for individual complaints or having a group of employes wait on us to present matters which on their face are not in line with good personnel practices," he added.

Kerlin inferred that resistance had been encountered to the President's program of personnel reform, enunciated in the executive orders of June, 1938.

Standpatters to Resist

"I desire to revert to the weaning of the old-line administrator from their time-worn, antiquated personnel policies," Kerlin said.

He indicated that the "younger and more progressive type of executive" will cooperate willingly with the program, but that a group of "standpatters . . . will resist many of the changes and adjustments" and will cause the greatest trouble.

Kerlin disclosed, in passing, a remedy developed for the case of a clerk who was a "veritable chatterbox," and who admitted that she was unable to break herself of her loquacity. She annoyed other clerks and her own efficiency was low.

With her consent and cooperation, Kerlin moved her desk to a corner of the room, with a wall behind her and another on one side. On the other side he placed an employe who was efficient but was deaf. In front he placed a clerk with whom the animated talking-machine was not on speaking terms.

The problem was solved, Kerlin says.

Charles Mott Dies in Florida

Charles Van Wyck Mott, 46, former secretary-treasurer of the United States Storage Co., of Washington, died yesterday in Hollywood, Fla. Death was due to a heart attack, according to friends here.

Mr. Mott, who retired in 1937, made his home here at 1357 Juniper street northwets.

A native of Milford, Mass., Mr. Mott came here at an early age and was educated in the District schools. He became associated with the storage firm in 1916.

He was past master of Lafayette Lodge, F. A. A. M., a past director of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association and a member of the Kiwanis Club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Selma McMillen Mott, and a son, Thomas Mott.

Dr. John Cartwright Will Open Forum

The first in a series of "critic forums," designed to present public book reviews of best sellers from the Catholic point of view, will be held tomorrow at 8:30 p. m., at the Mayflower Hotel.

Dr. John K. Cartwright will open the series with a discussion of two books—John Gunther's "Inside Europe, 1940," and Van Paassen's "Days of Our Years."

The Pleasant Way to Correct Constipation

Why let yourself in for all the discomfort of constipation—and then have to take an emergency medicine—if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble?

If your difficulty, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy toasted cereal—a natural food, not a medicine—has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it every day, it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, month after month, by the pleasantest means you ever knew!

Eat All-Bran often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY is the age of specialists. But during the last century the Building and Loan Associations pioneered as specialists.

The men who founded these Associations saw the need for specialization. For these men realized the complicated problems that arise in building, buying, refinancing or modernizing a home.

They realized that homemakers needed and wanted the experienced advice of specialists.

Therefore, the Building and Loan Associations were dedicated to this single field—giving advice and help to homemakers. And offering thrifty folk the opportunity to invest their savings in this cooperative enterprise.

The Building and Loan Associations still are the only private financial institutions that specialize solely in lending money for building, buying, refinancing and modernizing homes.

Most important, these Associations are local specialists. They have their roots in this community. And remember, their wealth of experience goes back to the past century.

Come in for specialized, friendly advice and help.

After Viipuri

More than two weeks have elapsed since the Red army boasted of having penetrated Finland's defenses in the Karelian Isthmus to a point only 4 miles from the important city of Viipuri. Since then there has been no slackening whatever in the Russian offensive. But Viipuri is still in the hands of its defenders.

That the Finns will be able to retain Viipuri indefinitely is, however, too much to be expected. The Russians have surrounded the city on three sides. They have occupied its southern suburbs. And with an overwhelming superiority in numbers they press on. Unless a miracle occurs, the city is certain to be taken. What then?

Viipuri has become a symbol. It is to the Finns somewhat like Verdun was to the French in the World War. Its fall, however discounted in advance, may thus have a disturbing psychological effect. Nor can its strategic significance be minimized. Viipuri is a junction point the loss of which would deprive the troops defending eastern Finland of their main source of supply. It is also a port whose possession by the Russians would enable them to transport troops to the Karelian Isthmus by sea.

However, the loss of Viipuri need be no more fatal to Finland's ultimate chances than has been the loss of the outer defenses of the Mannerheim Line. The fact that the Red army has been able to make comparatively little progress during the past fortnight suggests that the inner defenses, the original Mannerheim Line back of Viipuri, constitutes an obstacle which will require a further tremendous Russian effort to overcome.

After the fall of Viipuri, as is the case today and has been the case since the very beginning of the Russian invasion, Finland's capacity to resist will boil down very largely to a question of material and men. Given adequate supplies, and provided with at least a minimum number of replacements, the Finns will be able to fight on. Which is another way of saying that, in the last analysis, Finland's fate will depend very largely on what is done by her well-wishers in the Scandinavian countries, in Allied lands and elsewhere where Finnish courage and fortitude have left so deep an impress.

Avoiding Partisanship

The dilemma which has caused the American Farm Bureau Federation to shun the nation-wide AAA rallies to be held this week is not unique. Many other nonpartisan organizations have been confronted, particularly in recent years, with the choice between playing politics and holding aloof from causes in which they are vitally interested.

Various labor groups have had a struggle to maintain their nonpartisan character while questions affecting their future have been drawn into the political arena. In some instances they have abandoned neutrality and joined actively in political fights. But that course tends to weaken an organization which has drawn its strength from both major parties. When unions or other occupational groups cast their lot with one political party, defeat of that party may easily bring them disaster.

The American Farm Bureau Federation is making a courageous effort to avoid this risk. Its strength rests upon its appeal to farmers of all parties and political persuasions. While the federation has supported Secretary Wallace's agricultural adjustment program, it will have no part in celebrations which the AAA may be expected to turn to political advantage.

For the present this decision by the Farm Bureau officials appears to be a reasonable compromise. But it is questionable whether the Farm Bureau can long maintain a nonpartisan status if the Department of Agriculture continues to regulate our agricultural economy. Certainly there will be a strong pull by the advocates of the AAA to induce this farm organization to support them at the polls.

If Government control over economic activities continues to spread, it will no longer be possible to draw a line between economic and political problems. Occupational groups will find themselves drawn into the political vortex regardless of their desire to remain nonpartisan. So it can scarcely be said that the Farm Bureau has solved its problem in deciding to postpone solution.

First Things Last

Many citizens who are concerned over the city's second-rate health, welfare and educational facilities must be perplexed by the magnificent new bridges and highway improvements which Washington is acquiring. The District has ample funds for these purposes and is putting aside $500,000 per year for enlargement of its water system. But no such careful planning is possible for its schools, Health Department or numerous welfare activities.

The reason for this anomalous situation is well known to those familiar with the District budget. It provides special funds for both the highway and water systems. Last year the highway fund amounted to nearly $5,000,000. Into this single fund went all the receipts from the gasoline tax, special property taxes for street improvements, motorists' permit fees, the registration and weight taxes, automobile title fees, inspection fees and other miscellaneous charges against the owners of motor cars.

To this sum was added $657,000 from the Bureau of Public Roads. That figure represents the District's share of the Federal fund appropriated to aid local governments in the construction of highways. Moreover, the District, as well as the States, obtains very substantial aid from the WPA in making street and highway improvements. On such projects the District purchases the necessary materials and the WPA furnishes labor.

As a result of this preferential treatment, work is now going forward on four major bridge and underpass projects costing approximately $3,500,000. Among these is the desirable but not immediately essential new bridge on Massachusetts avenue, over the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway, to cost $550,000. That sum would have financed several health centers or one large school plant to take the place of several obsolete and unhealthy structures now occupied by Washington youngsters.

Under the present setup, however, money going into the highway fund cannot be used for other purposes. The result is to give Washington a more than ample program of street and bridge improvement while literally horrible conditions remain uncorrected at the Home for the Aged and Infirm, at the Children's Receiving Home, at the District Training School and similar institutions. Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the training school, yesterday informed Representative D'Alesandro, for example, that 450 feeble-minded children excluded from the regular public schools cannot be accommodated at the training school because it is already overcrowded.

There was a good argument for the special highways and bridges fund when it was first set up. Taxes imposed upon motorists were properly used to improve an inadequate system of streets. But now substantial sums appropriated for relief of the unemployed are also being used for streets, while urgent welfare needs cannot be met. Obviously this situation calls for a reexamination of these special funds, with the object of putting first things first.

Congress will be under a great deal of pressure to eliminate the local conditions that have shocked Mrs. Roosevelt as well as inquiring legislators. Money for the desired improvements must be found and higher taxes this year are out of the question. Such projects as the proposed armory may reasonably be postponed. But it seems also desirable to merge the highways and general funds so that essential education, health and welfare requirements may be intelligently balanced against relatively superfluous bridges.

Hamlin Garland

If Hamlin Garland is not to rank among the more significant American authors of his generation, that is largely an accident of time.

Had "A Son of the Middle Border" been written early instead of late in his career his status might have been altogether different. It would have been regarded as a landmark, and the critics perhaps might see in it something of a turning point.

The book, however, did not make its appearance until 1917. Even then it might have produced a more lasting sensation had it not been for the preoccupation with the war. The Genteel Tradition, as Mr. Santayana called it, still prevailed and Mr. Garland's picture of Midwestern life was for that day pretty strong meat.

But the great revolt that had been simmering in the pages of the Seven Arts, the (old) Masses and the Little Review was soon to break. Critics like Francis Hackett, Burton Roscoe, Van Wyck Brooks, and of course Mr. Mencken, were already elbowing themselves into positions of command. Only a year after "A Son of the Middle Border" came "My Antonia." Only three years later came "Main Street," "Jurgen," "This Side of Paradise" and "Moon Calf." By the middle of the 1920's Mr. Garland's "unsparing pages," as Howells had called them, seemed pretty tame.

To be sure, a full decade before Hamlin Garland's death the great revolt had petered out, leaving little or nothing to show for all its Freud-fattened and gin-flavored enthusiasms. Of all the swollen reputations that for a time had so dwarfed that of Hamlin Garland there is perhaps only one which a soberer age has not subjected to heavy discount.

Ironically enough, that one exception is Willa Cather, who in at least two of her novels has wrought in the genre of the "Middle Border" with far greater skill and beauty than Hamlin Garland, at his best, was capable of.

No Attack On Labor

President William Green of the A. F. of L. says that his organization wants wrongdoers, criminal racketeers and exploiters prosecuted under the criminal statutes of the country, whenever and wherever they may be found. Nevertheless, he and other A. F. of L. officials are hotly denouncing the Department of Justice for prosecuting building trades unions under the Antitrust Act.

Mr. Green and his associates must know that the evils which the Department of Justice is trying to extirpate in the case of the building industry cannot be reached successfully by criminal prosecution of individuals. The reason for the indictments brought under the antitrust law was set forth by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold when he recently defined it as the "only instrument we possess which was designed to prevent the arbitrary use of organized power that does not contribute to the efficiency of production or distribution or to the maintenance of the collective bargaining power for legitimate purposes of farmers or labor."

In invoking this law against building trades unions the Government has no intention of interfering with the legitimate activities of labor organizations. Nor is it primarily interested in punishing individual wrongdoers who are themselves sometimes victims of a bad system. The aim is to prevent unions being prostituted for antisocial and illegitimate objectives. In his public addresses Mr. Arnold has cited instance after instance of unreasonable restraint imposed by unions upon the building industry, paralleling unreasonable restraints imposed by manufacturers and contractors, sometimes in collusion with unscrupulous union leaders.

Thus unions often resist the introduction of technical improvements, insist upon employment of superfluous labor, enter into agreements with employers to hold up prices, and boycott unoffending employers to gain strategic advantages in jurisdictional disputes. It is practices of this sort, not merely grafting and extortion for individual gain, that the Department of Justice is trying to suppress. If the A. F. of L is really anxious, as Mr. Green asserts, to curb these menacing abuses of power, the best way to manifest sincerity is to cooperate with the Department of Justice in cleaning house.

The worst enemies of organized labor are those who try to defend the indefensible tactics in which trade unions occasionally indulge. Despite Mr. Green's professed lack of sympathy with the wrongdoers in his organization, his hostility to the only kind of remedial action offering effective relief from their exactions makes him in effect their ally.

In launching its attack against unreasonable restraints of trade in the building industry, the Department of Justice has not played favorites. Manufacturers and contractors as well as labor unions have also had the whip cracked over their heads. Hence there is no justification whatever for the charge that the Government's law-enforcement agents are trying to undermine the principles of unionism.

On the contrary, when labor unions are freed from the thraldom of leaders who use them for racketeering purposes they become much more effective defenders of their membership.

"A marked rise is noted in the birth rate of the American Indian."—Newspaper filler. Sometimes it looks as if this country will be overrun by these foreigners.

It's a question as to which is the braver: The man who dies for his country or the one who lives for it and keeps on paying more and higher taxes.

Approach From Both Sides

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Kermit, Winkler County, Tex., a community of about 1,500 souls, is involved in a controversy over one of the current volumes that achieves great artistic eclat by putting into print all the words ordinarily written only in chalk on the walls of necessary edifices immortalized by Chick Sale. Part of the folks want to read the book and more than half think it is just perfectly awful, or words to that effect. The Winkler County Commissioners Court has ordered the book withdrawn from circulation. "What will happen to the book now is a question," or so writes a newspaper correspondent from Kermit.

It is not a question to us. As they say at the office, "We know. We know." Practically everybody in Kermit who can read will read this book. The liberals will read it because they will be eternally dingledangled if any set of narrow-minded busybodies can tell them what they can read. The conservatives will read the book because, naturally, you have to know what you are actually talking about when you start out to criticize something, no matter how dreadfully you suffer in your pure and undefiled heart while you accumulate your weapons.

The Poets

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Out from the night of the ages, they, pantheistic, schismatical; scions of rebels, plebeians; fellows with her-etics, sages; companions to woman-kind, tragical—come to the morn of the present to sing to the denizen, the cause of emancipation, the fullness of liberation, the glorious revelation—the soundings of God among men.

Homer—the thunder of the Hom-erics eternal rolls through vistas dim, and sings into the hearts of men heroics in immortal hymn.
And that was in the Golden Age, when truth for one brief moment hurled her lances at the gate of dawn, and found the glory of a world. Virgil—the sweet Virgilian melodies lapped by the wings of vagrant winds dispense a magic artistry wherever man some beauty finds. And through the silent centuries, the marble base, the gilded dome still linger in time's memory—the pagan grandeur that was Rome.

Byron—Condemned—he fought against the tide; by friends deserted, one and all, whose idols down the centuries ride on phantom steeds, conventional. Exiled—he drank life's bitter wine, apart from earth's soulhungered breed, and sang of liberty divine, when time was rife with cant and creed. Shelley—thou whom the mastery of art enslaved with passion deep, divine: I worship with devoted heart, a votary at thy sacred shrine. The gods of beauty love, and song, immortal, touched thy soul of fire with truth to right oppression's wrong—and so thou sangst the world's desire.

Poem For Home

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
There was an old Farmer O'Neil, who tried to raise crops on his own barren field. He worked himself thin for his kids and a wife, but the earth that he owned grew little of life, and the once cozy house became a drab shack, while O'Neil was bent low from the crick in his back.

His wife became grouchy, his girl walked the street, and all became ill from nothing to eat. He applied for a loan, but he seemed a bad chance, with no sort of bond but the holes in his pants. They moved from the farm to a large city slum, where O'Neil looked the same as any old bum. He tried every day to improve his condition, but with nothing to do he soon lost ambition.

He read in the press with little emotion, that money was needed to ship o'er the ocean, but remarked to his wife, a brave, loyal spouse,
"If they borrow much more we'll soon lose our house, for well I remember how Erin was sold, and our people betrayed by a foreigner's gold.

For the British are cunning and greedy to boot, and they'll even show manners when coming to loot.
They can cry all they like about helping the Finn, but my job is home with my people and kin. If they have all this wealth to throw in the foam, they can give me a job and patch up our home."

KELVIN BARRY.

"Inadequate Defense"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
This letter is in reference to your well-written editorial of March 1 titled "Inadequate Defense.'

I wish to take this opportunity to commend you on the stand taken in this matter and to state that I am wholly in accord with the needs as expressed by you. It is indeed unfortunate that at times an innocent person's life and liberty should be jeopardized due to the fact that he cannot afford adequate legal counsel and that no provision has been made by our local government to take care of this deficiency.

I hope you have started the "ball rolling." FREDERICK SCHWAB.
Washington, March 4.

"Relief From Dust"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The greatest crime is deliberate ignoring of unbearable conditions in many quarters, such as, for example, man-created sand or dust being spread over our streets day after day, as if there was no one living in all these houses, neither policemen, nor other city officials, specially paid for this very thing, cared to notice what a horrible condition of street we all have to put up with.

In fact, we might say, the crime is, refusal to use intelligence, or make use of the intelligence of others, when it does not directly concern our own immediate interest.

Now, in this particular instance, it is a case where authorities have not had the vision, in the face of past experience, to make a regulation, so that, when a big contractor, making large excavations, has to have dirt carried in trucks and dumped right against our street, he could be made to hire an extra hand to wipe off the chunks of dirt from around the wheels, just before the trucks reenter our streets. In the absence of this arrangement, in view of the many trips being made by many trucks, it is clear that thousands of pounds of dirt thus being scattered all along the streets, soon are getting dry, and we are being virtually buried in dust. Residents are begging relief from dust.

Paramount Need

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
It is not improbable that much of motorists' harsh criticisms of recently effected traffic regulations in and about Union Station Plaza are merely characteristic of the moderns' reaction in the initiatory stages of essential control by process. In our day of just speed—and more of it, concern of too many motorists is chiefly with relationship of feet to accelerators.

Consequently,. more often than ever gets reported, this type of driver dashes through surface-level street car safety zones heedless of life and limb of those without alternative to transportation by bus and trolley.

Lover of the auto, steady patron of the taxicab, I am absolutely without prejudice to the owners and drivers of motor vehicles—but as firmly with the conviction that, in the matter of wheel-traffic regulations through Union Station Plaza, the drivers "got a break." Certainly so, from the standpoint of the paramount public interest. It is the pedestrian that's "hamstrung" in the Washington Union Station area!

No person afoot can enter or leave Union Station without crossing at grade a maze of wheel-traffic lanes, other than via the eastern portal, provided neither the President of the United States nor other dignitary or visiting potentate is there, and then only if the pedestrian is coming or going north of E street northeast.

Most "Eastern portailers" are railroad employes who, not unlike the "Monumental City's" famed stray canines that easily dodge and laugh at the dog-catchers, have been long accustomed to evading vehicles.
The paramount need of Union Station is a system of ramps and underpasses, engineering difficulties to the contrary, nevertheless.

Welles' Trip Set Him Thinking

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
When President Roosevelt decided to send Sumner Welles to Europe it set me to thinking. Some of the questions that arose in my mind were why was an American representative sent to Mussolini and Hitler?
Is Mussolini an apostle of peace? Is Hitler to be asked, or given, concessions? And with all the condemnation heaped on the heads of the "dictators" and "aggressors" by Roosevelt and the press, why was Moscow so conspicuously omitted from the itinerary? And why is the United States, at this stage, so interested in involvement in European affairs?

First of all, it seems to me that if it is the intention of Roosevelt to have peace, all nations should be contacted or sounded out. To brand the U. S. S. R. as an aggressor and then to approach Mussolini as a sounding board for peace is the height of inconsistency.

To take the next step for a talk with Hitler smells very much like Munich. And to omit Moscow from all conversations leaves the entire matter open to suspicion that something is rotten in Denmark. Is it possible that, instead of Welles' mission being a peace maneuver, it is an anti-Soviet war maneuver?

Then there are the secret messages handed to Mussolini, the Pope, etc.
Is this the "open diplomacy openly arrived at" enunciated by Woodrow Wilson?

Why aren't the American people let in on some of the secrets? If peace is to be established, why be so secretive about it? Or is it peace?
Surely, to holler thief and then to negotiate with him sounds somewhat of conspiracy.

Yes, peace should be striven for and established upon a permanent basis. But the way to do this is through the participation of the entire world, excluding no nation. And the first step in that direction is for the United States to stay clear of

The Post Impressionist

John Dudd, A. B., M. A.,

They removed the body of Mr. Dudd from Washington a few days ago, and after brief funeral services at the home of his greatly admiring family at Hobb's Corner, N. J., it was duly interred in the burying ground near the grove of oak trees at the corner of the 40-acre lot. His friends here might consider it filed for future reference, come judgment day; although none, so far as known, made so inconsiderate a remark.

Instead, most of them, including the professor who had been watching for the past six years John Dudd's progress toward the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, regretted the untimely end of a most promising career. And his acquaintances at the bureau in which he had pursued for 30 years a course of exemplary devotion to his country's filing systems, acknowledged the loss of one whose sense of order and efficiency was a credit to the Civil Service.

All this was decorous and dignified, and would have appealed unerringly to the soul of John Dudd, who had cultivated by instinct the qualities that those adjectives denote. But it contrasts ironically with the unpredictable and unruly way in which Mr. Dudd's life was terminated at age 58, putting an end at an early stage to his ambitious program of scholarship. For he was struck down by a motor car at a street intersection, when the "walk" sign was in his favor, and the automobile that plowed into him had no right to be within 30 feet of his thin shanks.

Had John Dudd fallen victim to influenza through exhaustion induced by his midnight studies, there would have been at least poetic justice in his demise, and the comments at home among his relatives would have attained an even higher degree of laudation, if that were possible. As it was, little was said at Hobb's Corner about the proximate cause of his death—everything was centered on his learning, his long public service, and his association with the affairs of the Nation's Capital.

These had become a familiar theme after John, having adventurously obtained a job in a grocery store in Philadelphia in the first place, had thrown it up in 1909 in order to go to Washington to make a career for himself in public service. For there the knowledge of practical affairs obtained in the Philadelphia interlude had contributed to his status in the bureau and had led eventually to the academic activities that did him so much honor.

The latter were most noticeable after the exaltation of pure brain that became the vogue in Washington shortly following 1929, and when Dudd had begun to come into his full powers. Attendance at night school during the 'twenties had given him one degree. Later the creation of the Brain Trust awoke him to the possibility, and possible utility, of acquiring others. Here his early acquaintance with the field of commerce, coupled with the growing emphasis in bureaucratic circles on economics, dictated clearly enough the direction that his studies should take.

This was a direction in which John Dudd found it entirely feasible, and even enjoyable, to undertake to win a master's degree. For he had sufficient leisure at night to put in the required hours in class, and he had his seasoned understanding of the general background for his thesis, which was: "The Arrangement of Canned Foods in the Modern Retail Dispensary for Groceries." Thus his purpose was fulfilled within four years of the time it first assumed vague, but alluring, outline in his mind.

With that achieved, an even rosier possibility loomed through the murky reveries of his relieved and happy mood. This was nothing less than that on the occasions of his visits home, or his attendance at the dinners of the New Jersey State Society, he should be addressed as Dr. Dudd.

And judging by the progress he had made over the past two years, this ambition was one that he would have been able to achieve, at the latest by age 60, had death not happened to intervene, in its irrational way, to put an end to everything.

Such considerations are now, alas, more academic than ever. Yet they have their place in any record of his passing, for without knowledge of them neither Mr. Dudd's relatives nor his friends and acquaintances would be able to render his memory the full measure of honor and respect that is due him. Nor could the folks at Hobb's Corner be able to feel upon themselves all the rays of reflected glory in which it was John Dudd's habit to bathe them.

We are doing here what we can to repair death's ravages, by inditing what is after all a feeble eulogy of one who surpassed most of his fellows in everything he actually undertook. For we feel that it cannot be for nothing that John Dudd became an exceptional student in a city of students. It must not prove to have been a needless devotion that was expressed by the absence of his spare form from the queues before the motion picture houses, and by the fact that when he did visit Rock Creek Park or Hains Point, he always carried along at least two text-books, besides a briefcase crammed with Government reports in the field of his special interest.

If it did not turn out to be so, it might have been, that on some glittering tomorrow there would have been filed by others in the Library of Congress—just as he had filed away in his bureau the work of lesser men—some such opus as: Methods of Merchandising for Increasing the Per Capita Consumption in the mid-Atlantic States, of Dishes Whose Mainstay is Finnan Haddie; by John Dudd, A. B., M. A., Ph. D., D. R. M. (Doctor of Retail Merchandising).

Although no such event can now come to pass, the fact that it might have done so, is not without its inspiration to those who are convinced that we will never reach the milleninum but by degrees. And it is for that reason, if for no other, that I here call the attention of all loyal and studious Washingtonians to the true facts about the late John Dudd, A. B., M. A.

What Hitler Told Welles

By Jules Sauerwein
Foreign Editor of Paris Soir

His Bid For Mediation

Paris, March 5.

IN HIS INTERVIEW with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, Herr Hitler certainly played his last card for mediation by the United States and he certainly did not mention his great dream of a German hegermony over the world. That means the destruction of France and Great Britain, and for any hope of that, Germany needs, right now, breathing space.

Before Mr. Welles then, Hitler must have stressed three things—his own personal moderation in war aims; secondly, his horror of the slaughter, about to begin, and finally, the grand and noble role which the United States could play in helping to prevent it. In order to heighten the effects of his references to the terrible nature of a modern war, he sent Mr. Welles immediately to see Field Marshal Goering. In order, on the other hand, to demonstrate that an economic peace between Germany and the United States could serve as a curtain raiser to world peace, he introduced him to Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, the economist. Thus Mr. Welles left Berlin with a bag of information on which he felt it necessary to reflect for a few days.

IN THE FIRST PLACE, a picture was drawn for him of a Central Europe appeased and tranquil under the influence of a contented Germany. Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and part of Poland, Hitler said, was the natural domain of the Reich, not only because Germans there were brought back to the homeland, but because their territories contain resources Germany cannot do without. Hitler always makes a distinction between the word "reich," which he describes as a historical reality, and the word "Bereich," or region he considers politically and economically attached thereto, and finally his "Lebensraum," or vital space, which he proclaims as necessary to the nourishment and respiration of the Reich, as North Africa is to France and the overseas territories to England.

Hitler certainly tried to convince Mr. Welles that Germany's war aims were already completely realized and that they only need be recognized to establish a new German Empire in a pacified Europe. In contrast to this, he no doubt pointed out that the French and the British war aims are in reality the destruction of the whole structure created by Germany, and the wiping out of the Reich as Hitler conceived it.

Such aims, the Fuehrer doubtless stressed, cannot be attained without a frightful struggle. As proof of his pacific intentions, he no doubt made much of having refrained, during the past six months, from unleashing the struggle. As a war veteran as he has often proclaimed that he detests war. As an artist and an architect he recoils at the idea of destroying treasures of culture. He would never give the order for it unless obliged to, and at this point the Fuehrer very probably discoursed on the opportunity for the United States, if it really desires to preserve the peace of the world, to act both honorably and profitably as mediator.

Above, in general lines, was about what Hitler told Mr. Welles. In order to convince Mr. Welles that these ideas were profoundly rooted in Nazi Party itself and not alone personal fancies of the Fuehrer, an interview was then arranged with Rudolf Hess. This was because when one talks with Hess one has the impression of restrained intelligence as his statements are frank and honest in the extreme.

HOW FAR did Dr. Schacht go in his outline of economic relations that could be reestablished between the United States and the Reich? He certainly advanced cautiously because he is a practiced and skillful technician and he probably restricted himself to discreet allusions to banking credits. He certainly, as he has frequently done for this writer, expressed opinion "that by satisfying Germany's economic needs you will diminish the power of Nazi creed."

However that may be, it is certain Mr. Welles was given not only an outline of the situation, but actual suggestions.

The newspaper Politiken, generally well informed on German matters, says that Hitler spoke with anger about the British possessions — Gibralta, Malta and Singapore. If so, he certainly made violent attacks on England and must thereby have given a hint, though trying to conceal it, of his plan for world domination.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Imaginary Diary

Monday—Arrived in Italy okay. Was notified that Mussolini was busy reviewing a new goose step but that Count Ciano would see me. Nearly started a new war by absent-mindedly asking hotel manager if he knew where I could get a good Italian dinner.

Tuesday—Was late reaching parley with Ciano because of streets being blocked by parades. Found Ciano so peaceful he dispensed with usual Italian custom of starting to argue before hearing the subject announced.

The count says Italy wants peace as soon as she is sufficiently armed for it.

Wednesday—Traveling through Switzerland. The Swiss are so peaceful I am wondering if other countries would be less belligerent if they yodeled.

Thursday—I see Goering and Hitler soon. The prospect is quite unnerving.

Friday—Saw Gen. Goering. Both of him. He wanted to know if I was H. G. Wells or Orson Welles. It was hard to get down to peace talk as he wanted to discuss spring styles in men's military coats. He said Germany was not opposed to peace unless it meant she would have to get along without quarreling with everybody. I asked him if he thought Hitler might retire to the background. He said, "Can you imagine any prima donna retiring to any background?" I had an uncomfortable feeling that there was something under my chair. It turned out to be Goebbels. As I left Goering he said, "Remember us to Roosevelt and tell him not to get discouraged; he'll get into this mess yet."

Later—Met Hitler in the Rumpus Room. He asked me how America was and said he was sorry to hear it.

He then asked for an explanation of the peace idea. I told him Mr. Roosevelt felt peace would be a good thing. He replied, "When I've been in as many fights as Roosevelt I'll think so, too."

He suggested that we carry on our discussions in Russian. I said I did not understand Russian. He said, "Neither do I, but a peace conference is a conference." One word from me led to another. In fact it led to a dozen others. Hitler said Germany was always for peace and that if her artillery held out she would get it.

He kept fumbling with a microphone during the entire talk and once remarked, "If television was here I could conquer the world in six weeks."

Monday—Arrived in Paris. Daladier said France was not only for peace now, but had been hoping for it for centuries.

Tuesday—In London. Saw Chamberlain. He suggested that we hold discussions in English. I said this might commit us to a clear understanding of what we were saying. He saw the danger of this at once.

I am to see him again tomorrow. I can't escape the conclusion that everybody in Europe is in favor of peace up to the point where peace is proposed.

The Good Neighbor

By Ernest K. Lindley

He Meets A Snag

ONE OF THE MOST exciting and promising proposals for closer economic collaboration with Latin America is in danger of being stalled by Congressional apathy—or economy. This is the plan, envisaged by the Department of Agriculture, for stimulating the production in Latin America of the tropical and semitropical plant products which we need but do not produce ourselves.

Sixteen of the 20 Latin American republics are tropical or semitropical. Our agricultural experts believe that with the aid of research, technical guidance and help on the organizing side, these countries could produce a large part of our needs for quinine, insecticidal and medicinal plants, tropical fibers and even rubber.

NOW WE ARE dependent chiefly for these products on the Far East. Henry Wallace argues that if we are serious about hemisphere solidarity we will encourage the production of these articles by our neighbors to the south. Our sources of supply would then be close to home, over water routes that easily can be protected by our Navy. In the unsettled state of the world we don't know what it might cost us in money and naval power to keep open trade routes and supply sources in the Far East.

Another point is made in favor of having them produced in Latin America. It may discourage the production of cotton and other semitropical products which compete with our own farmers. In Colombia, for example, they are trying to raise wheat, cotton and rice when, according to our experts, they could more efficiently raise quinine and other tropical products.

We send about $200,000,000 to the Far East for rubber, which comes from a plant native to South America. The Dutch and the British took the rubber plant, improved it and now supply the world. Secretary Wallace has asserted that by using scientific methods it undoubtedly would be possible to develop in Latin America strains of rubber plants which are high-yielding and also resistant to the leaf-spot disease which now plagues the native rubber plant of South America.

Both the British and the Dutch have spent considerable sums of money in research into the production and improvement of tropical plants. Next to nothing has been spent in this hemisphere. One of Wallace's ambitions is to establish an Inter-American Institute of Tropical Agriculture, located probably in a Central American country. For this he is seeking the aid of private foundations, although it is a venture which might appropriately receive Government money.

AT THE SAME TIME, Wallace has asked for a small amount of Government money to pay for sending a few specialists on exploratory surveys in Latin America. More than a year ago an interdepartmental committee of our Government, under the chairmanship of Sumner Welles, recommended that about $1,000,000 a year be spent on promoting various closer cultural and economic ties with Latin America. The Department of Agriculture was to receive about $350,000 of this, partly for these exploratory surveys and partly for keeping agricultural attaches at some of our embassies and legations in Latin America.

Last year the agricultural venture boiled down to a request to Congress for $130,000, which was denied.

This year the Budget Bureau approved $50,000 for the exploratory surveys, as part of a total of $291,940 for all the purposes set forth by Welles' committee.

The House cut the total to $155,500, and the tropical agricultural survey to $35,000. The Senate Appropriations Committee reduced the total to $120,000 by cutting out altogether the agricultural survey. The Senate stood by the cut.

At two successive sessions, Congress has refused to appropriate money for Guam, where a harbor must be developed and eventually fortified if we intend to be a naval power in the Far East. By law we still expect to cut loose from the Philippines in 1946. It would therefore seem sensible to begin to develop nearer sources of supply for the tropical products which we need.

CONGRESSMEN of both parties from the farm belt are complaining about increasing South American competition in the production of cotton, grains and other products competing with our own. One way to discourage this trend is to stimulate the production of other, noncompeting products in the 16 tropical and semitropical Latin American nations. (These exclude Argentina, Chile, Uruguay and Paraguay.)

Yet when it is proposed that Congress follow out its own logic, a few mental cogs slip somewhere. A grand policy, worth exploration at least, is sacrificed to save the price of a modest Congressional junket or of half a modern bombing plane.

Britain Vs. Italy

By Barnet Nover

The Real Issue Examined

THE DISPUTE between Great Britain and Italy which has flared up to such dangerous heights since the British announced their decision to halt all sea-borne German exports of coal to Italy, is only incidentally a dispute over coal.

If it were that and that alone it could have been straightened out long ago. Last year Italy imported 11,000,000 of the 14,000,000 tons of coal she consumed. Of that total somewhat over 7,000,000 tons came from Germany by rail and by sea. But the coal which Italy has been getting from the Reich she could just as easily and just as cheaply get from Great Britain. The British are not only willing but eager to supply her with this commodity. And if Italy lacks the cash to pay for it, Great Britain has made it clear that a barter arrangement can be made.

AS IT HAPPENS, the coal problem points up the real question which is at issue between Italy and the Allies. That question involves Italy's present and prospective role in the European war.

Italy is not a belligerent. But by her own admission she is also not a neutral. She scorns that designation, preferring to call herself a "nonbelligerent."

This is more than a mere play on words. On the contrary, the term is very descriptive. For the war has not disrupted the Berlin-Rome axis. Germany and Italy are still allies, although one is fighting and the other is not. Nor has their difference of status prevented them from collaborating in various spheres of action.

Thus they have collaborated in the Balkans, where Italy has been active in preventing the establishment of a bloc capable of resisting aggression from whatever quarter. And they have also collaborated in the economic sphere, Italy serving as an entrepot for German imports from the outside world.

This continued collaboration between the axis partners, moreover, suggests the possibility of its ultimate extension in the military sphere.

Italy has remained out of the war during these six months. The Italian people clearly do not want war. But it is not equally certain that Mussolini does not want war. Perhaps he does not. Italy has not yet recovered from the two wars into which the Duce previously plunged her. But Mussolini wants certain things which it may prove impossible to secure without war and certainly not without the defeat of the Allies, whose defeat may prove impossible unless Italy intervenes against them.

WHAT MUSSOLINI wants is the undisputed control of the Mediterranean which is now dominated not by Italy but by Great Britain with the assistance of France.

If the Allies are victorious, Italy's position in the Mediterranean will be even more secondary than it is today, for an Allied victory would mean the destruction of German sea power. If Germany is victorious, however, it would mean the end of the British fleet, the end of British control of the entrances to the Mediterranean, the end, most likely, of the British and French empires. In the ensuing scramble Fascist Italy, as Germany's friend and ally, would stand to gain something and might gain much. She has, on the other hand, little to gain from an Allied victory.

IT IS THUS to Mussolini's presumed interest to help Germany in every way, particularly every safe way. This means, since the greatest threat to the Reich at the present time lies in the Allied blockade, helping Germany circumvent British and French economic pressure. No wonder, then, that the Rome government has refused to accept extension of the Allied blockade to German exports, including exports of coal and has threatened to repudiate the Anglo-Italian gentleman's agreement of April, 1938, unless the British desist from their contemplated course.

But there is another factor determining Italy's policy which must also not be lost to sight.

Italy is not only Germany's ally but also Germany's neighbor. Unless Rome is willing to play Germany's game in the economic sphere, in the Balkans and elsewhere, the Reich might begin to squeeze Italy.

There is, for instance, the ever-present possibility of a German thrust in the direction of Trieste thus giving Hitler a foothold on the Adriatic which Mussolini would find most unwelcome.

There is also the possibility that Italian capitulation to Allied pressure in a form dangerous to German interests would result in a tightening of German ties with Russia and a possible German-Russian thrust in the direction of the Balkans. This Italy wants even less than she wants the formation of a solidified Balkan bloc.

FROM A MILITARY point of view Italy happens to be doubly vulnerable. She is vulnerable in the peninsula and she is vulnerable in her empire. And Great Britain has now seen to it, by the seizure of Italian colliers loaded with German coal, that Italy has been made aware again of her vulnerability in the economic phere.

This action was, to be sure, primarily designed as a means of putting the screws on Germany which more today than in the past must "export or die," as Hitler once pointed out. But it is also a form of preventive sanctions against Italy, a reminder to Mussolini that there is a limit beyond which the Allies may not permit him to play the German game. And it is probably more than a coincidence that they are showing their hand at this time, with spring and all it may mean in the way of more active war, just around the corner.

The State As A 'Strict Racket'

Is The Alternative That Of The State As 'Broker?'

By Dorothy Thompson.

JOHN CHAMBERLAIN'S "The American Stakes" is an important book if for no other reason than for the light it throws upon the direction which youthful left wing thought is beginning to take in America.

Mr. Chamberlain is in his thirties. He is exceptionally gifted, vigorously intelligent and honestly groping. He is a journalist of varied training. He has been for a number of years a book reviewer and has read, it seems, practically everything that has been written in recent years—and in remote times—about politics and economics. He has also been a reporter, one of Fortune's young men, and has therefore had opportunity to test theoretical ideas against the actual behavior of men and women in organized groups.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN knows all about Guild Socialism but, curiously enough, relegates its ideas to at least temporary eclipse, failing to observe the very strong traces of them that are in the conception if not the practice of Mussolini's Corporate State, Schuschnigg's "Staendestaat" and Hitler's Project State, with its hierarchical structure of Labor Front and professional, managerial and peasant organizations, each with its "status." He does not see that the various forms of Fascism, were the political power differently distributed, actually approach Guild Socialism.

But he has discovered suddenly what a lot of people whom he criticizes have always known, namely, that the essential problem of political and economic life is the problem of power. In a fine burst of discovery he announces on page one that "No book on politics is worth its salt if the author lacks a clear notion of the origins and evolving nature of the state." He then, for Heaven's sake, accuses Walter Lippmann and this columnist of "ignoring or forgetting the origin of state power in brutally unashamed force."

Since the continual recognition of that origin is perhaps the one thing that Mr. Lippmann and I have in common, and that Mr. Chamberlain and most of the left wing political commentators of this country have neglected giving thought to, one wonders how come.

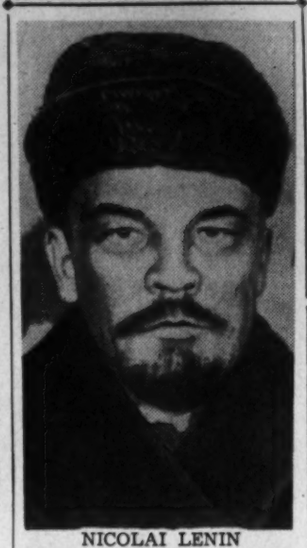
IT WAS NOT necessary to go to Russia or to wait to see what Russia would do to know what was wrong with Russian Communism. What is wrong with it is that it is politically a means for the delegation of irrevocable tyrannical and naked power. This is inherent both in the structure of the Soviets, which Mr. Chamberlain does not analyze, and in the nature of the party, which he does not clearly analyze.

He speaks of the "Politburo" as if it were an instrument of the state. Actually the state is an instrument of the Politburo, which is the governing body of the party. The state has been reduced to the "executive committee" which Marx foresaw. The state is a mere bureaucracy, and all power is in the party, which is a gang, or, as Mr. Chamberlain illuminatingly describes this thing falsely called the totalitarian state, a "strict racket."

Mr. Chamberlain praises the NEP phase of the Russian experiment as its best and most hopeful phase. But the NEP phase was doomed because none of its contracts was ever legally protected. To use Mr. Chamberlain's phraseology, the NEP men, the peasants, craftsmen and small entrepreneurs who briefly had a chance to use their own initiative, were merely people whom the "Strict Racket," with its gang leader, permitted to work one side of the street until the Strict Racket got around to that side of the street itself. The only way the NEP could have protected itself was by guns, for that is the only way anything is protected in Russia. And that Strict Racket allowed them no guns. Therefore, when the moment came they were liquidated.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN comes to the conclusion that, the nature of the state being what it is, the best that can be hoped for it is that it act as a broker between contending pressure groups. Again he chides this column for lamenting that Mr. John L. Lewis merely represents "another pressure group." That, according to Mr. Chamberlain, is Mr. Lewis' function, just as it is the function of the manufacturers to represent its interests."

I agree with Mr. Chamberlain that it is perhaps futile to expect of any labor leader—of Mr. John L. Lewis, for instance—that he represent anybody except labor. One must not ask him to think of the welfare of society as a whole,



NICOLAI LENIN
He let the Nepmen "work the other side of the street" for a while and to lament that he does not do so puts one down as a "philosophical idealist."

Well, first of all, if that is not Mr. Lewis' function, then society as a whole must be warned, because Mr. Lewis (like the National Association of Manufacturers) asserts that the interests he represents, or hopes to represent, are synonymous with the welfare of society as a whole.

Nor do I agree with Mr. Chamberlain that there is no way of approximating the general welfare except through a brokerage process conducted by the state between pressure groups moved by conflicting economic interests. This seems to me to be too cynical and to be denied by the presence in flesh and blood of Mr. Chamberlain himself. For Mr. Chamberlain does not belong to a pressure group and is not preeminently motivated by his economic interests. Mr. Chamberlain is an eager intelligence, using that intelligence to work toward a society which is compatible with his reason and his conscience, otherwise he would not have written this book.

And there are more John Chamberlains in our society than he seems to think. There are hundreds of thousands of them—people who cannot be categorized as "Organized Labor" or "Organized Farmers" or "Organized Capital." They are people who, like Mr. Chamberlain, want to live in a society that is tranquil, reasonably safe, adequately defended externally and internally, relatively harmonious, egalitarian enough to do away with slums, indecent poverty and such phenomena as John Steinbeck's Okies; and unegalitarian enough to allow sufficient liberty for the release of the creative energies of individuals.

AND IF the state is to act as a broker, then it is essential that there should be a very large body of citizens who belong to this group—the group of the disinterested, the group of those who can conceive that there is such a thing as the general welfare. If everybody joins a pressure group you get deadlock, for the state can be a broker only if it can appeal to "the decent opinion of mankind."

I would go even farther. If the general welfare is an "ideal," then that ideal would have to be quite cold-bloodedly invented in order to make any political democracy function.

The democratic state is unthinkable without the conception of compromise and consensus, and that demands that there be many people trying to hold some balance, and shifting their votes and their opinion from time to time on quite pragmatic grounds. These people must demand even of Mr. Lewis and even of the National Association of Manufacturers that they take thought of the whole; they must go on demanding it even if they do not succeed, merely as a brake on the greed for power.

Of course, Mr. Chamberlain himself is a "philosophical idealist" if one accepts his implicit definitions. He certainly has in his own mind a picture of a good society, which he wants to see brought about.

HE IS by way of being a political philosopher in this book; and, as I have said, the interesting thing about the book is his flight from what he would call Utopia into what he would call realism. But Mr. Chamberlain is still seeking Utopia, only his Utopia has become very modest.

His Utopia has become a tolerable society instead of a perfect society. In that Mr. Chamberlain shows wisdom. And because he is seeking a tolerable society—that is to say, a society tolerable for Mr. Chamberlain and probably for most Americans, conditioned as they are to certain ideas—Mr. Chamberlain has made the discovery that it is possible for a tolerable society to be mixed (what he calls a "limited racket") and to have room in it for collectivism, cooperation, individualism, capitalism and even damned foolishness.

Thus Mr. Chamberlain agrees with what has been the thesis of this column for as long as it has been written. One must not expect too much of the human race. One must not expect to "solve" everything. As a matter of fact, the attempt to solve all the problems of society invariably means the most wholesale destruction of society.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN make a keen observation when he says that freedom in the modern world is in the interstices of the various forms of political and economic organizations. But he is not logical about his foreign policy. He is a nationalist of the most gringo sort and believes that this country can maintain its institutions in the midst of a totalitarian world. But in such a world the interstices will become fewer and narrower. The elasticity will be radically reduced. He needs to carry his thinking further. But he is thinking in a realistic direction.

Mr. Chamberlain greatly underestimates psychological forces. If Hitler wins the European war, the chances of this country going Hitlerian in one form or another will be multiplied by a thousand per cent, if for no other reason than that success is infectious. The tendency of modern life is in the direction of totalitarianism, anyhow—that direction was started by huge monopolistic industry and accelerated by the economic interpretation of history that thinks that bread and butter are infinitely more important than freedom of any kind. The drift is toward the totalitarian state everywhere, including here. It has not gone so far that it cannot be checked, and Mr. Chamberlain's book is set against that drift, and therefore this column is for it. But if Hitler governs Europe it will take more than Mr. Chamberlain's book to check the stampede in this country.

Brazil To Attempt Production Of Steel

Copyright by New York Times

Rio de Janeiro, March 5.—President Getulio Vargas has signed a decree creating the Metallurgic Institute to set up furnaces and rolling mills to manufacture steel rails, sheets and bars. The capital is to be furnished by the government and by private sources. It is believed this is the first step to carry out a plan to manufacture steel here on a large scale, possibly allowing foreign capital to participate under the percentage plan rejected by the United States Steel Corporation. However, it is not stated officially whether foreign capital has been invited to participate.

"Charm School" Tells Maryland Coeds to:

'Get That Wonderful Look in Your Eyes'

Repeating the boy friend's name "in a caressing manner" is a good way to acquire voice tone, Mrs. Hester Beall Provensen, of the public speaking department, told more than 50 coeds attending the University of Maryland "charm school" last night.

Other less romantic but equally effective methods are to listen to radio announcers and read poetry, Mrs. Provenson said.

Post Staff Photos—Goodwin.

1. THE HAIR must be correct at all times, Maryland University's "charm school" emphasizes. Betty Hottel watches as Bess Paterson has her hair dressed by Carrie Combs, who last night showed the coeds the proper way of grooming their tresses

2. GOOD SPEECH is one of the signposts on the road to charm, the girl were told. Mrs. Hester Beall Provensen, assistant professor of speech, shows Sugar Langford how to exercise the diaphragm, the use of which is important to improve speech

3. POISE AND POSTURE come next on the "charm school's" program. Miss Gwendolyn Drew, professor of women's physical education, tells Ann Calhoun Ames, Mortar Board president, how important it is to carry the head erect and shows how it increases the distance between the head and shoulders

"Men are simple-minded creatures—as a general rule," she explained. "Get that 'You're wonderful' look in your eye and let them do most of the talking."

When a girl does have something to say, Mrs. Provensen urged a rounded pronunciation of vowels to make the speech more attractive.

"Vowels are for beauty and consonants for clarity," she said.

Miss Gwendolyn Drew, head of the women's department of physical education, criticized popular fads in posture. Several years ago, she said, the "debutante slouch" was all the rage.

From a pyhsiological standpoint "the correct way to walk is the charming way," she advised.

Miss Drew said correct walking, sitting and standing postures would give girls a feeling of self-assurance.

"You can only have poise when you feel at ease within yourself," she observed.

The "charm school" was held under the auspices of the university chapter of Mortar Board, national women's senior honor society.

A. J. Sundlun Is Reelected By Merchants

Hasley, Langford, Sloat Named Vice Presidents By Association Board

Arthur J. Sundlun, president of A. Kahn, Inc., was reelected president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association yesterday by the board of governors.

Elected vice presidents were John J. Hasley, manager of the Palais Royal; Mack L. Langford, president of the Sanitary Grocery Co., and Theodore B. Sloat, president of the Garden T Shoppe.

Franklin W. Harper, president of the E. Morrison Paper Co., was named treasurer; Ringgold Hart, attorney, was elected general counsel, and Edward D. Shaw secretary.

Since organization of the association 30 years ago, the population of Washington has doubled, said Sundlun in his annual report, and last year was the best business year in the city's history.

The business uptrend was based on better conditions throughout the country, combined with Washington's recent growth.

While Washington ranks twelfth among the country's largest cities, said Sundlun, it has more telephones per 100 persons, more automobiles per 100 families, more radios, more electric refrigerators than any other major city in the world. Only New York and Chicago outrank Washington in hotel business, he added.

It was voted to appoint a committee to study the possibility of bringing light industries to Washington with a view toward increasing employment.

Woman's Place Is in Politics, Ohio's First in Congress Says

Mrs. Bolton, Elected to House After Death Of Legislator Husband, Declares Mothers Must Be Active 'To Protect Race'

By the Associated Press

Mrs. Frances Bolton, of Cleveland, the Nation's newest petticoat legislator, thinks women should be active in politics "because they are very much more alive to the coming dangers than men."

"The reason for this is that it is their job to raise the children," Mrs. Bolton said yesterday—her first day in the House as the first woman sent by Ohio to Congress. She is a Republican.

She was named in a special election last week to fill the vacancy left by the death of her husband, Representative Chester Bolton.

"Must Protect the Race"

Women have a job to do in politics, she said.

"As women, mothers, we must protect the race.

"That is why women are so alive to the issues of the day. They don't propose to have one generation after another shot."

She sat in her office surrounded by flowers sent as tribute to her legislative debut. She has an executive's poise—forceful, direct. Her blue eyes look straight at you. She is 54, and her hair has turned gray. She wears it neatly waved.

"Women are interested in peace, but not in a passive way," she continued. "They want a constructive peace, want to help build such a peace that will enable nations to get along with each other."

Interested in All

Rated as one of America's richest women, Mrs. Bolton's private philanthropies have been in support of music—aid to musical organizations and young artists—and to nursing organizations and education. She endowed the nursing school at Western Reserve University.

In Congress she said she expected her interest to gravitate toward health programs and education. "But also I'm interested in it all. I have a national viewpoint, and it is just as easy for a woman to get a national viewpoint as a man."

Institute to Hear Senator King

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, of the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, will speak at 8 p. m. Friday in the Washington Hotel before the institute on Puerto Rican problems at a meeting sponsored by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Joining Senator King in a symposium on "Puerto Rico's Political and Economic Status" will be Representative Crawford (Republican), of Michigan.

"Five Years of Tyranny in Puerto Rico" will be the topic of Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York at 9:30 a. m. Friday.

Dr. Mitchell Dreese To Address Association

"Opportunities for Those Who Do Not Go to College" is to be the subject of an address before the Western High School Home and School Association, Thirty-fifth and R streets, tonight at 8 o'clock by Dr. Mitchell Dreese, professor of educational psychology at George Washington University.

Miss Clara Stutz, of the Western High School faculty, will tell the audience how Westerners meet college requirements.

Job Insurance Board Agrees On Six Changes

Names Group to Study Methods of Rating Employers' Records

A special subcommittee of the District Unemployment Compensation Board yesterday was named to study the relative merits of two employer experience rating systems now before the group and make recommendations at a meeting at 11 a. m. Friday.

On the committee are Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner; Daniel J. Callahan, employer representative on the board, and John A. Locher, employe representative.

The board agreed on six features of the proposed amendments to the District Unemployment Compensation Insurance Act, which were introduced in the House by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi.

Six Points Approved

Features of the bill approved are:

Raising the maximum weekly benefit payment from $15 to $20 and the maximum time for payments from 16 to 20 weeks.

Minimum qualifications for a person to receive benefit checks to be receipt of $150 in wages within the year. The present qualification is 13 weeks' work out of the previous 52.

A partial payment plan permitting a worker to receive up to 40 per cent of his benefit check from part-time employment, before reducing his unemployment compensation. This, in effect, would result in the worker receiving about 70 per cent of his former wage by his part-time work and benefit check.

The Civil Service feature of the McGehee bill, which would blanket in all employes of the D. U. C. B.

Provisions for a regular audit of the tax receipts by the District auditor.

Would Split Bill

The board decided to recommend a separate bill to take care of a large number of individual cases and discrepancies now covered in the McGehee bill. The new bill would list each item of overpayment or fraud or other discrepancy.

At the Friday meeting at the District Building the subcommittee will confer with Elwood H. Seal, corporation counsel and John A. Marshall, director of the D. U. C. B. Two plans for the merit system were considered yesterday at the meeting. These are one recommended by the Washington Board of Trade and the one now in operation in Connecticut. There was no indication of what attitude the board will take on the merit plans.

Under the system, an employer having a more stable employment record would have a smaller pay roll tax to pay than an employer with a greater turnover among his workers.

News of Capital Night Clubs

O'DONNELL'S SEA GRILL READY. On Friday maybe, Saturday probably, or Monday at the latest, the new O'Donnell's Sea Grill will open its doors to admiring throngs. A preview of the Sea Grill leaves one feeling that a book should be written about it instead of a paragraph. There's the "Wharf" done in weathered 75-year-old shingles from the Maryland shore, and across the gangplank (over real running water) is the cozy captain's cabin. Upstairs is the Harbor Room in white waxed wood rubbed until the knots show through in natural color, the tavern and the hunt club room. The Sea Grill is the creation of an artistic New England family. Decorator Marshall B. Martin; his wife, Helen Doak Martin, who did the murals, and their daughter, Joyce Marshall Martin.

"BOMBSHELL" IN TROIKA. That stunning creature, Luba Malina, the "International Bombshell" (see picture above) opens in Troika tonight. If all bombshells were like Lubina, a barrage would be a pleasure. Her songs will probably reduce Troika's male patrons to happy shreds of humanity . . . La Helen Hamilton wants one and all to know that there's no minimum at Troika between 12:30 and 2 a. m. This gives you a couple of hours of dancing and supping without running into a set charge.

HI HAT CARNIVAL. Ray Harts and his new Diplomats hadn't been in action for 20 minutes before they inspired a sideline primadonna, a beautiful minx who looked like Jeannette MacDonald and sang "I'll See You Again" no end prettily. Busy bee Betty Ferro, of the FCC, buzzed over to get her name for us, rushed back with a paper napkin inscribed Marquise Diane Eugenie de la Boistour. Anything for a laugh. But wouldn't it be funny if she were the Marquise Etcetera? About this time some one spilled a rum collins over us, we trust by accident, and we suddenly remembered it was time for that dinner date with Maria, Joann and Joy at Mayfair, so we didn't get to talk to the Diplomats, but they sounded swell. Maestro Harts looks like Ray Burch, Oscar's bright assistant. Under a wrong impression we asked Burch about his piano playing. Did he get hot!

LUBA MALINA, "International Bombshell," who'll appear at the Troika tonight

LOVE WALKS IN. Maestro Eddy Brandt, of the Metronome Room, and pretty Betty Ann Huffines, student at the Marjorie Webster School, are full of that spring spirit that leads to June weddings . . . Eddy's former missus, Lee Russell, married Cinemactor Herbert Marshall a few days ago.

PARTIES STUPENDOUS. Shar-Zad. President Roosevelt and his Cabinet adjourned to Shar-Zad after their Carlton dinner on Monday, to enjoy the doings of star Broadway entertainers, including Carmen Miranda, Sheila Barrett, Kitty Carlisle and Laurette Taylor. . . . Bill McCune and band adjourned to the ballroom.

Lounge Riviera. The Naval Academy track team, 30 strong, and about eight popular lassies, broke a flock of rumba records in Pete Macia's rhythm the other eve. . . . George Marshall, his Redskins' schoolboy band, a big group of football coaches, the Redskin players will celebrate in the ballroom at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street on Thursday. Mrs. Marshall will be the only lady in the party.

SHOREHAM SKETCH. John Elliott baritones rather gloriously . . . Manager Gardner Moore at the ringside with Mrs. Moore, who's wearing a cute hat of red posies, and their daughter, Ann, pretty as a junior movie star . . . Songstress Marjorie Ting in the role of listener instead of warbler. We hear she'll be back in the Blue Room show very soon.

SCATTERBRAIN DEPARTMENT. We hear that people after viewing Princess Gourielli-Tchkonia exhibit of modern art and primitive sculpture in the Mayflower, rush right into the lounge and order double scotches . . . M'sieu Martin, of the Madrillon, was awfully annoyed the other eve. Seems that every dinner reservation in the place was taken up by 6 o'clock. Tsk! . . . If you want to find Paul Kain, whose orchestra will be at Glen Echo next summer, just look in Dick's Grill at dinner time. . . . Singer Virginia Pollard hurried back to the Anchor Room a bit too quickly after that cold, has had to take a couple more days off to nurse her voice. Manager "Mac" McCarthy, of the Robin Hood, has a stone house complex. He was raised in an old red stone house in Canada, now lives in a stone house up Warrenton way. . . . Dot O'Connell, the clever manager of the Neptune Room, is planning a trip to Nassau. Her 4-year-old daughter, Yolanda, who's the image of mummy will be her only companion. . . . Maxine Patrice is held over at Del Rio again. No wonder she's the "Sunshine Girl." . . . Those notable dancing Hartmans will be the guests of Ethel Fistere, chief Arthur Murrayette, in the Pall Mall Room this evening. . . . Arthur Todd writes from the Bahamian Club at Nassau to say he'll be back in the King Cole Room about the end of March. Sends his "best" to all his friends. . . . If you want to be sure not to meet any certain person, you might sit back of a pillar and near the K street door of the Rainbow Room. By keeping an eye on a mirror you can see incomers, but they can't see you.

A Woman's New York

—By Alice Hughes

Ruth Chatterton Returns to Broadway And Warms Hearts

New York, March 5.

A home-town girl has returned to her native heath after 15 years of Hollywood and Europe. There was no shagging in the New York streets, but there was warmth in many a heart. The lady is Ruth Chatterton, the star of stage and screen, who has been winning hearts and influencing emotions since she was in her 'teens. She came back to us in a pretty grim play called "Leave Her to Heaven," a play by the same John Van Druten whose "Young Woodley" gave the gorgeous Helen Gahagan, now Mrs. Melvyn Douglas, a great chance 15 years agone.

Ruth Chatterton

Ruth's glad to be home, and of course we're delighted to have her. She was a wonder girl of the stage. She made her debut, as a child, in the famed Columbia Stock Company in Washington, when the late Lowell Sherman was leading man, and Lenore Ulric played bits, and a little girl named Helen Hayes was taking her first stage steps. Then the late Henry Miller took young Chatterton in hand, and lucky are those who remember her great days in "The Rainbow" and "Daddy Longlegs" and "Mary Rose." Our stage was then in its last great glory before talking films fell upon it and wounded it grievously. Chatterton was in the grand tradition, like Geraldine Farrar of the Met. She inspired countless high-school crushes.

Hollywood claimed her, and she made a line of memorable pictures. Remember "Madame X," that old battle-horse? She married and then shed two husbands, the handsome young English Ralph Forbes, and later George Brent, firm standby as a movie leading man. Then three years in Europe, acting here and there, and now back in her own home town, which loved her long since and lost her awhile. Ruth looks very lovely, has the same incandescent charm that has won so many hearts. I hope, for her sake and ours, that her new show does good.

This handsome lad, Donald Munroe, who was chosen top glamour boy, is being wined and dined by cafe society girls; of course, as a night club promotion stunt, need I say? Anne Schrafft's town car called for him to go to his official leap year debut.

The taffeta frock below also was modeled by Miss Anderson at a recent style show. It is striped in three tones of blue—navy, sky blue, and violet. Designed by Hollywood's Omar Kiam (not the tent maker). Good for slender figures

These are all Hollywood proposals for spring. Encircled is Carmen Miranda, fresh from Hollywood triumphs, whose sensational fashions are being displayed this week in her current stage presentation. Following these—on Monday—will come an exhibit of local fashions at the Connecticut Avenue Association's style showing at the Mayflower Hotel for the benefit of the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank fund

'Vampy' Clothes For Leap Year

Paris (U.P.).—The fashion forecast seems to indicate that the French girl is out to get her man this season with "vampy" clothes, lots of figured veils, fancy flowers, laces and the like to light up the youthful frocks, which will be little changed in line this season.

There is a determined trend away from black. Lots of blue of a sort of dreamy tone is shown and there are colors to attract the men home from the front.

Vitality and Skin Must Be Protected; Too Rapid Loss of Weight in Older Persons May Make Faces Take on Haggard Look

IT used to be taken for granted by some that reducing made a woman look older. The reason for that is now obvious: women reduced the wrong way and they often did look older!

If you will have some slight regard for your health and appearance, reducing can make a new woman of you. The two prime requisites are that you protect your vitality and your skin while taking off the pounds.

You safeguard your vitality—and you should not underestimate the importance of this—by including the normal requirement of the vitamins, minerals and protein in your reducing diet. You cut down on the calories and reduce by omitting from the menus the foods that are high in calories and low in these protective elements. The calories can be cut to best advantage by leaving off the desserts, pastries, and other dishes high in fats and carbohydrates.

Distended Skin

To protect your skin as you reduce a time allowance must be There are several factors which determine the rate at which you can lose weight beautifully. made for the skin contraction.

If you have been overweight for a number of years, the skin has been distended for so long that its elasticity has been lessened. Therefore, you must reduce at a slower rate. It may be that you should not attempt to lose faster than one-half pound per week.

Another factor in skin elasticity is your age. After you have passed the half-century milestone, it would be very inadvisable to try to average a loss of say 3 pounds per week. That weight loss is too abrupt. Your skin cannot accommodate itself to the rapid change and the result will be the multiplicity of wrinkles.

Treat Skin Gently

There are special measures which increase the skin's tonicity and they should be given full consideration. The first of these is exercise. Regular exercise helps to replace the lost fat with good, firm muscle tissue, so that skin sag and flabbiness are averted. The exercise also improves the circulation so that the skin is better nourished.

Fresh air is an excellent skin tonic. You know how much more animated you look when you have been out of doors! Well, the fresh air tones the skin and the superficial muscles.

Massage is another tonic for skin and muscles, and throat massage is particularly valuable to the reducer. But don't neglect your throat exercises! And a word of caution—don't apply your cold cream so vigorously that the skin is pulled and stretched. Treat your skin gently.

When warm water is applied to the face and throat, follow with a mild astringent, or dash cold water over the tissues.

Chocolate Tea Biscuits a Taste Surprise

THERE IS a taste surprise in fluffy Chocolate Tea Biscuits. The following recipe is the one by which Ruth Wakefield, a well-known dietician and lecturer, makes tea biscuits for her guests at the lovely old Cape Cod house at Whitman, Massachusetts, known as the Toll House.

Chocolate Tea Biscuits

Cut ½ cake of economy size semi-sweet chocolate (7 ounces) into pieces the size of a pea. Cut in 3 tablespoons fat rather evenly. Sift 2 cups all purpose flour, 1 tablespoon baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt, and 4 tablespoons sugar together. Add ¾ cup milk. Manipulate lightly until dough leaves sides of bowl. Flour board and knead lightly. Roll out. Sprinkle cut up pieces of chocolate on dough and roll up. Cut in 1-inch slices and put into small greased muffin tins with rolled side up. Brush top of biscuits with melted butter and sprinkle with a mixture of sugar and cinnamon. Bake in 425-degree oven for about 15 minutes. Remove from pan.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Spurned by Husband, Who Wishes to Marry Secretary, Sick Wife Is Without Any Resources; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A friend of mine is in great trouble. After 18 years of happy married life, her husband has fallen in love with his secretary and wants a divorce. His wife has done social service work and during the depression she supported her husband for some time. (Now he is an engineer with a Government job.)

Recently the wife has been sickly, unable to keep down much food, and weighs only 90 pounds. She is no longer attractive and although she still loves her husband, she has no hope of winning him back. She has no family, no resources and no place to go.

The question is, can she arrange to get a divorce and secure some alimony? Her husband refuses to speak to her, evidently trying to force her to leave him. Does this give her sufficient grounds for divorce? And where can she get the legal advice she needs? Sincerely yours,

NEXT FRIEND.

Husband Must Pay Expenses of Redress

DEAR N. F.: In cases where evidence exists that a wife has legitimate grievance against her husband, yet is without funds to employ legal counsel, the court usually requires the husband to pay her counsel fees. I am sure this would be true in your friend's case. Also, in view of the fact that she is without "health, family, resources or place to go," her husband undoubtedly can be compelled to support her, under penalty of being held in contempt of court if he fails to do so.

She may, therefore, "get the legal advice (and representation) she needs" from any lawyer she chooses to consult who sees fit to take the case. And she should suit herself about filing for divorce, since she has the alternatives of "limited divorce" (which is to say, divorce from bed and board) and of separate maintenance without divorce. While she might think she was doing the generous thing in freeing her husband, since he no longer loves her, there is a possibility she would be doing him a greater favor in restricting him to a position where he cannot marry again—at least, not immediately.

It is not unusual for a middle aged man to go overboard in a feverish infatuation for a younger woman, and to disdain his wife while the fever lasts. Sometimes the fever doesn't leave him until he has bulldozed his way to freedom and second marriage, after which he wakens to a remorseful realization of his enormous selfishness, perhaps; or to the discovery that he has been "taken to the cleaners" by a scheming girl who was looking for a meal ticket.

It happens occasionally that a philandering husband who furiously resents, at first, a canny wife's steadfast refusal to set him free, reclaims his emotional equilibrium months or years later and is inexpressibly grateful to her for holding him to his course. And because a wife has lost her health and attractiveness, it does not follow that she no longer has claims to her husband's devotion and protection. When he married her he solemnly vowed to accept her "for better or for worse"—and he is a pretty poor specimen of manhood if he runs out on that promise just when she needs his loyalty most. (A point, by the way, which this man's secretary-sweetie would do well to ponder.)

However, if your friend prefers absolute divorce, there is likelihood that she can obtain it, on grounds afforded by her husband's taunting conduct, which amounts to cruelty calculated to render her home life intolerable and further impair her broken health. So tell her to be of good heart, whatever her decision, and to take her problem to a first-class attorney, who can guide her in a comfortably self-protective course.

Wife Saved Girl From Husband's Wiles

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On February 23, I read in your column a letter signed, "Bus Driver's Wife," in which a woman tells of her husband's love for, and desire to marry, a 17-year-old high school girl. It so happens that I had a simiar problem once myself. My husband ran around with other women, and strange as it seems, he also fell in love with a girl about 17.

He didn't ask me for a divorce because I found out about the affair before he confessed it, and I went to see the girl. I told her what kind of man he was and assured her I wouldn't give him a divorce. The girl was very sweet about the whole thing, and I invited her to have dinner with us the following Sunday. She came, met my son, and three years later they were married.

Of course, I know this isn't the sort of thing that happens usually. But if I were this woman, I would find out who the girl is, tell her how unhappy my life had been, and make it clear to her that she would be ruining her life in marrying such a man, who was twice her age. I think your correspondent would be acting unfairly to everybody concerned in giving her husband the divorce he asks for. In particular, why make it possible for him to wreck a young life? I hope she isn't thinking just of herself.

Biscuit Rejuvenation

Yesterday's biscuits become tomorrow's dessert when split, toasted and covered with a warm fruit sauce. Or let them serve as a covering for a thick sauce—apple, peach or apricot. Dip the biscuits in milk quickly, then lay them on the sauce which has been placed in a shallow pan. Bake 10 minutes in a moderately hot oven.

Spring Silhouette Has Natural Lines

New York (AP).—Lots of wool twills and reps are used in the suits and coats that will be worn on Easter. Stripes, plaids and checks appear in other suits and top coats, while plain crepes and jerseys and neat all-over prints make the best frocks.

As far as silhouette is concerned, fashion has made no very drastic change. The 1940 profile has kept a small neat waist, less constrained than the winter's wasp waist. Skirts are still short and often fairly full. (Paris has even shortened a few to mid-knee.) Necklines are generally fairly high and shoulders slightly widened.

One of the favorite silhouettes is the long torso, designed to mold the upper part of the figure suavely to the hipbones and give a long ingrown curve under the arm. (Dresses cut on this profile often have skirts shirred on at the hipbone line.)

Charles Martel, "chief architect" of the classification system now used in the Library of Congress, was feted on his eightieth birthday at a luncheon in the Library yesterday.

Later, Martel received the congratulations of his friends in the Library's Whittall Pavilion. He was given a friendship book with letters of greeting from more than 200 librarians and bibliographers in the United States and abroad.

Martel, veteran of 43 years in the Library, directed the 20-year job of working out the Library's present classification system, used now in 200 large libraries. He was praised as the "chief architect" of the system by Dr. Herbert Putnam, retired Librarian of Congress.

A nativeof Switzerland, Martel went to work in the catalogue division of the library in 1897, after several years in a Chicago library. He served as a chief of the classification division, and retired as head of the catalogue division in 1930.

He has continued to be active in the library and is on the staff as consultant. He walks to work daily from his home at 316 D street southeast.

Martel was one of four American librarians who helped with the reorganization of the Vatican Library in Rome from 1927 to 1929.

Ex-Manager Is Indicted In $400 Theft

Fisher Is Accused Of Embezzlement In Shoe Store

Gilbert N. Fisher, 43, was indicted yesterday on a charge of embezzling $400 belonging to the shoe store of which he was manager last December.

Samuel P. Cohen, proprietor of the Hollywood Shoe Stores, told the police that Fisher was in charge of a branch at 1301 H street northeast, and each forenoon was supposed to put the previous day's proceeds in the bank. On Monday, December 4, Cohen said, Fisher failed to make the deposit, although on Saturday he had mailed to his superiors a statement showing $400 receipts for that day.

Fisher was arrested in Houston, Tex., and voluntarily returned here. "He told me that he got a couple of drinks in him and did not know what he was doing, that the first thing he realized he was in Augusta, Ga.," said Cohen.

Fisher was placed on $1,500 bond by Commissioner Needham Turnage. He was fined $50 in 1938 for embezzlement, on complaint of Harold E. Erwin.

The indictment was one of 53, which accused 48 persons, returned to Justice Peyton Gordon yesterday. The presentment was the heaviest that has been made this year.

Those indicted were:

First degree murder—John Henry DuBose, 43, colored, for the death of Alice Hicks, 43, colored, of six pistol wounds at 3317 Cleveland avenue northwest, on January 15.

Housebreaking—Ezekiel Robinson, 24, colored; David Stoddard, 20, colored.

Housebreaking and larceny—Lloyd S. Chase, 22, colored; Jimmie Maness, 27; Maceo Dargan, 24, colored; Clarence Kinzer, 21, colored; Paul O. Lloyd, 29; Gilbert M. Daniels, 23; Wendell Dockery, 31, colored; Nathaniel Foster, 18, colored; James E. Wilson, 25, colored; Joseph G. Isenberg, 18 (four indictments).

Unauthorized use of automobile—James E. Wilson, 25; Joseph G. Isenberg, 18; Clarence R. Jackson, 18, colored; William G. F. Brooks, 17, colored; Hammond A. Fisher, 26, colored; George M. Matthews, 25, colored; Russell Beale, 23, colored.

Housebreaking and larceny from Government—William A. Butler, 40, colored.

Grand larceny—Clarence R. Jackson, 18, colored; William G. F. Brooks, 17, colored; Morris E. Hodges, 24, colored; Ralph D. Edwards, 36; Thomas L. Townsend, 39; Alonzo J. Proctor, 32, colored; Louis R. Hoy, 31; Mary Drake, 24; Ruth Shipley, 20; Marie Airlas, 21.

Robbery—William G. F. Brooks, 17, colored; Melvin Witherspoon, 25, colored; Myrle M. King, 23; Clarence M. Boase, 35; Lucille Ball, 29.

Receiving stolen property—Geraldine Hutchinson, 36, colored; Estelle Robinson, 45, colored.

Assault with intent to rob—Eugene Hinkel, 20.

Assault with dangerous weapon—James P. Halestock, 30, colored; Lucille P. Knight, 20, colored; Lloyd S. Chase, 22, colored.

Embezzlement—Gilbert N. Fisher, 43.

Obtaining money by false pretenses—David Fixman, 44.

Running a lottery and having numbers slips—James D. Smith, 46, colored; Cora Lee Peris, 28, colored; Charles C. Pierce, 30, colored; James Belk, 36, colored; Nicholas J. Principe, 27; Henry J. Norwood, 43, colored; Georgia Parks, 48, colored.

Having untaxed liquor—Donald F. Harley, 29, colored.

Depredation of private property—Clarence A. Dawson, 20, colored.

The grand jury dismissed these charges—Having untaxed liquor, James A. Washington; housebreaking and larceny, John C. Knoeppel, 34; grand larceny, James A. Vines, 29; robbery, George W. Brookens, 34, colored.

Nations to Get China Rights, Japanese Say

Embassy Announces Policy Is to Recognize Interests of Powers

Japan's policy is to recognize "the fair and just rights and interests of the foreign powers in China," the Japanese Embassy here asesrted yesterday.

As proof that Japan has no intention of "driving foreign interests out of China," the embassy cited resumption of dredging in the Whangpoo River, under direction of a board representing the major powers with interests in the Shanghai area, and the settlement of "many" cases arising out of damage to foreign property.

All restrictions on the rights and interests of third powers in China are the result of "temporary expediencies emerging from imperative military demands," according to the embassy.

These emergency measures will be removed with the eventual conclusion of necessary military activities," the statement continued, "and normal conditions will be restored as a matter of course."

Be done with winter!

Install automatic gas heat now and banish winter worries

You can change over to Gas Heat IN A FEW HOURS!

IT'S been a tough winter, hasn't it? And there's probably more to come. What a pain it's been to the husband who has been ripped from his sweet repose time and again to stoke the furnace, worry about fuel supply and delivery and hundreds of other bothers that put the head-of-the-house's head in the furnace half the time.

It's a drab picture which we hate to harp on. So let's get quickly to the pleasant part of this story. Automatic Gas Heat (no furnace tending, no fuel ordering or storing, no work, no worry, no nothing but pleasure) can put the furnace man right back in his easy chair—snap!—just like that!

Is it expensive? No. This modern miracle of Automatic Gas Heat is decidedly not expensive. Fact is, over 21,000 Washingtonians of all classes are now snapping their fingers at winter because they have gas heat.

Sounds like the real McCoy doesn't it—a permanent solution to house-husbands' troubles? It is—and we know you'll agree when you've learned the brass tacks facts about this automatic method of heating—by Gas!

Talk of Congress' Wives Centers on New Hose

Mrs. Dudley White and Mrs. Charles Clason Are Hostesses at Large Breakfast Given at Congressional Club

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF YOU SEE several Congressional wives sporting hose that look a bit different these days—better stop and take a good look. They're samples of those Nylon numbers you've been hearing so much about. You know, the ones made by a mysterious process from coal, air and water.

They're not on sale yet, and this is not an advertisement. It's merely a news note to the effect that all wives of Senators and Representatives who came to Washington with the Seventy-sixth Congress now have a pair of gift Nylons—thanks to Mrs. George Short Williams, wife of the Representative from Delaware. She distributed them around to members of the Seventy-sixth Congressional Club not long ago, and there's been a lot of hose talk ever since.

Yesterday there was at the large breakfast given by two Congressional hostesses, Mrs. Dudley White, of Ohio, and Mrs. Charles R. Clason, who entertained at the Congressional Club. Punctuating the buzz that permeated the room where the party took place was one rather lengthy conversation touching on the merits of Nylons. "Yes, they're supposed to wear well," somebody said. "But they don't cling quite like silk hose, and they feel a bit funny at first. Maybe one can get used to them; but I wonder."

Well, the rest of us will have to wait around several weeks, and perhaps months to try them. They won't be on the market until early summer and perhaps not then.

Mrs. Taft Among Guests

To get back to the breakfast—it was one of those pleasant, informal affairs that draw Congressional wives in droves, as well as a number of residential Washingtonians. More than a hundred guests were seated at the ten tables, which were centered with spring blossoms.

Receiving together, the two hostesses were trimly turned out in spring ensembles. Mrs. White's featured a figured frock in black and white, while Mrs. Clason wore blue and white. As guests greeted their hostesses, they were presented with a spring blossom and were asked to look for places at the table centered with a bouquet of the same type flower. Thus, those present soon found themselves at a "tulip table," a "jonquil table," or probably a "snapdragon table." Twelve in the group, however, received white blossoms upon arrival. They were to be seated at the head table where a mixed bouquet carried out the decorative motif.

Seven Senatorial hostesses and five wives of Representatives were seated with Mrs. White and Mrs. Clason. The group included Mrs. Robert A. Taft, of Ohio; Mrs. Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Edward Burke, of Nebraska; Mrs. Lister Hill, of Alabama; Mrs. Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana; Mrs. Charles W. Tobey, of Vermont; Mrs. John A. Donnaher, of Vermont; Mrs. Clarence Lea, Mrs. Otis Bland, Mrs. Daniel Reed, Mrs. Frank Crowther, and Mrs. Roy Woodruff.

Nine Assistant Hostesses

Assistant hostesses, each of whom was assigned to a table, were Mrs. Albert Carter, Mrs. Charles L. Gifford, Mrs. Clyde Smith, Mrs. Albert Thomas, Mrs. John J. Sparkman, Mrs. Francis D. Culkin, Mrs. Donald H. McLean, Mrs. Robert Rich and Mrs. Charles Halleck.

CAPITAL SKETCHBOOK: Table talk at a recent dinner given by a topflight New Dealer indicates that even among the stanchest Roosevelt enthusiasts, James Roosevelt's popularity has dwindled considerably since he started divorce proceedings.

The third-term question was introduced and there were the usual speculations as to whether the President will run again. "Of course he will," dejectedly averred the only Republican present. "And much as I hate to say it, of course he'll win. I fully expect to see a Roosevelt in the White House as long as I live. After Franklin, we'll have Jimmy. Then Elliott; and then the second Franklin, "and finally, Johnny."

"Please," piped up a Supreme Court Justice who was a Roosevelt appointee, "Could we not have Elliott before Jimmy?"

ON THE CALENDAR: Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone will entertain at luncheon tomorrow . . . Justice Justin Miller will be host at a stag party March 12 . . . Mrs. Raymond Clapper will give a luncheon March 20, in honor of Mrs. Bulkley Griffin . . . Mrs. David Cushman Coyle will be hostess at a luncheon today in honor of Marjorie Barstow Greenbie (Mrs. Sidney Greenbie), the writer . . . Mrs. Coyle is planning another luncheon for March 15.

Off for Brief Virginia Visit

Underwood & Underwood

Leaving today for the hunting country—but not to hunt—is Mrs. William A. Morgan, pictured here with her Sealyham terrier, Wamsie, which will be left at home. Accompanied by Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark and Mrs. Alexander Walker, who recently arrived from her home in Hawaii, Mrs. Morgan will drive to Upperville this morning to spend a couple of days visiting Mrs. Edmund Horgan. Bridge and more bridge is scheduled for the hostess and her three guests

Pan American Union Director Fetes Dr. Boyd

The Ambassador of Panama, Dr. Don Jorge E. Boyd, was the guest in whose honor the Director General of the Pan-American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe, entertained at luncheon yesterday in the union building.

The Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace, was among the guests as were the Undersecretary of Commerce, Edward J. Noble; the Counselor of the Department of State, Judge R. The L. V. Mulveys, Recently Wed. Make Home Here

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence V. Mulvey are making their home in Ogden Gardens here following their marriage on February 16 in the Temple Baptist Church. The wedding of the former Miss Eleanor H. Lewis took place at 8:30 o'clock with the Rev. R. L. Gregory officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. O. J. Rogge, wife of the Assistant Attorney General.

The bride wore a pale blue crepe jacket ensemble and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of yellow roses. Miss Alta Mae Lewis attended her sister. She wore a dusty pink costume. Daniel D. Mulvey served as best man for his brother.

R. W. Blisses To Entertain Miss Mero

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss will have as their guest week after next Miss Yolanda Mero, of New York, the pianist, who will give a program at "Dumbarton Oaks" Tuesday, March 19, at 4 o'clock. Miss Mero will speak of the composer Moussorgsky and will give illustrations from his "Boris Godounoff."

Proceeds from the musical afternoon will be used to aid European artists who are trying to start life anew in Cuba and South America. Miss Mero, who is a Hungarian, makes her home in New York, where she has given several successful musical talks this winter at the homes of Mrs. Vincent Astor and Mrs. John Sloane.

Patronesses for the program March 19 include Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Trustun Beale, Mrs. Bliss, Mme. Cantacuzene, Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. Philip Owen Coffin, Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. Carl A. Mme. Alfaro Gives Luncheon For Envoy's Wife

Mme. Ricardo Alfaro entertained at a luncheon yesterday afternoon in honor of Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador. Dr. Alfaro is in Panama at present running for President in his homeland where he formerly served as chief executive.

The luncheon was given at the home on Forty-third street, which Dr. and Mme. Alfaro built several years ago. Spring blossoms were used throughout for decoration.

Guests included Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Ambassador of Ecuador; Senora de Castro, wife of the Minister of El Salvador; Senora de De Bayle, wife of the Nicaraguan Minister; Senora de Caceras, wife of the Honduran Minister; Senora de Arcaya, wife of the former Venezuelan Minister; wife of the Third Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, Senora de Sousa, sister of Senora de Alfaro, and Mrs. Thomas Burke.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Martha Bacon Is Learning to Fly, While Betsy Barton Writes for Magazine

TWO YOUNGER MEMBERS of exceptionally energetic families are following in their parents' steps and putting the accent on success. Martha Bacon, daughter of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and the late Representative Bacon, is within two hours' flying time of obtaining her license as a private pilot, and Betsy Barton, whose parents are Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton, has been requested by a national magazine to do another article on young people similar to a series she wrote last year.

While Mrs. Bacon has been busy this winter raising funds to buy arms for the Finns, her pretty, curly haired daughter has been hard at work on Long Island studying aviation. She got an A-plus on each of two written exams she took recently for her license.

Though lots of young people have enrolled in the flying courses inaugurated recently by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, girls still are very much in the minority. This despite the fact that the Government is offering $350 worth of lessons for only $40. After graduation the girls and boys qualify as private pilots—to obtain commercial licenses they would have to spend almost twice as many hours in the air and $500 more.

Mrs. Bacon is pretty airminded herself, from a passenger viewpoint, her only objection being that it's a nuisance to have to cancel trips when the weather is bad.

BETSY BARTON is busy sending out hundreds of questionnaires to find out what college students graduating this year feel about their chances in the world. Her survey last year centered on youth's attitude toward peace. As her arithmetic is not on a par with her writing ability, Betsy has a young man who collaborates in compiling the results of the polls.

Now in Florida convalescing from an operation, Betsy will join her parents here in about two weeks.

ONE OF THE FIRST Washington contributors to the "save the Metropolitan Opera" fund now being raised was Mrs. Tracy Dows' cook. As the cook listens avidly to every Saturday afternoon broadcast, she eagerly chipped in the dollar being requested of all radio listeners to raise the million necessary. Though there are 10,000,000 radio listeners-in on the opera, the money is not coming in as fast as hoped, so at the request of her good friend, Lucrezia Bori, Mrs. Dows has consented to act as chairman of a Washington drive to collect dollar bills. She is receiving donations at her home, 3126 O street northwest, in Georgetown.

A SLEIGHT-OF-HAND man got most applause of the artists who came here for the cabinet dinner to President Roosevelt on Monday. Carmen Miranda dropped in after her theater performance and made a big hit singing and "manipulating her midriff," to quote one of the guests. Sheila Barrett, the mimic supreme, was cheered for her imitation of a stage mother introducing her seven-year-old prodigy daughter to a producer. The President and Mrs. Roosevelt laughed as hard as anyone when another artist took them off. All in all, it was well after midnight when the party broke up.

ODDS AND ENDS: Miss Helen Marie de Limur will give a dinner before the Thrift Shop ball tonight. Her guests will include Nancy Glover, Mary Wilson and several other members of the committee. Incidentally, Carmen Miranda has promised to appear at the ball . . . Watch for further news of an organization of a group of maidens who call themselves "The Lucky Thirteen." Already they have picked May 29 for a benefit dance at Normandy Farm, but are not yet ready to make their names known to Washington at large . . . Visiting Mrs. Francis Whitten until the end of the week is Mrs. Dorothy Norris, of New York. Mrs. Whitten will give a luncheon for her today.

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Lecture

When Mrs. Roosevelt lectures Friday morning at the Shoreham at 11 o'clock, under the auspices of the Town Hall, in the audience will be another famous lady lecturer, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

The latter has occasionally staged imitations of the First Lady, and the story goes that Mrs. Roosevelt once sent for her with the request that she perform in her presence. Later Mrs. Roosevelt was reported as saying that Mrs. Longworth was her greatest help in drawing her attention to her faults as a speaker.

Many luncheons will follow the First Lady's address, which will be on "Women's Place in the Modern World." Among those who will entertain are Mrs. Bruce Smith, Miss Rebecca Dial, Mrs. Alexander Stark, who will have a party of six; Mrs. Charles B. Hamel, Mrs. J. D. LeCron, Miss R. T. West and Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown. Dr. and Mrs. Harry W. Little have also made reservations for luncheon following the lecture.

Among those who will hear Mrs. Roosevelt are Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mrs. Lillian Morgan Ailes, Mrs. Paul May, Mrs. Francis R. Hagner, Mrs. Oswald Ryan and Mrs. William H. Rapley.

Clubwomen Visit WJSV Transmitter, Inspect Equipment, Enjoy a Luncheon

Mrs. Eleanor Lee, Station Executive, Is Hostess at Party

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Members of the Soroptimist Club, the Home Economics Women in Business and representatives of several other women's clubs in the District, were entertained at luncheon yesterday in the new transmitter station of WJSV, at Wheaton, Md. Mrs. Eleanor Lee, director of women's activities for the station, who is program chairman for the Soroptimists and also a member of the Home Economics Women in Business, acted as hostess.

The women—70 in the party—were greeted by Mrs. Lee, Miss Marie McGram, chief operator and receptionist, and Miss Janet Campbell, of the WJSV staff, at the Willard Hotel and taken from there in two buses to Wheaton.

The bus in which the Soroptimists rode had music most of the way there and back, and it was not radio music, either. The Soroptimists, noted for their spontaneous group singing, sang songs to their president, Mary Bourke, Past Presidents Jean Bennett, Ella Werner, Edna Knight Gasch, Caroline Stephen and Mary Lewis, who were in the party, and even to the bus driver. He smiled and blushed until his ears were red.

Modernistic Station Impresses Visitors

Grace Goodpasture and Mrs. Lewis were the song leaders. All they had to do was to swing into the first phrase and all of the other Soroptimist joined in.

When the buses arrived at the station, the guests were impressed by the handsome new station, of modernistic design, standing in what was once a broad stretch of farm land, with its three tall towers in the background. A board walk led from the road to the building, as it is all too new to have landscaping even started.

Inside, the women went up the winding stairway, remarking at the attractive blue and silver color scheme in the interior, and found at the head of the stairs a long buffet table ready for the luncheon. Beyond it was a semicircular rail forming a gallery from which they could see how the station was operated.

James Middlebrook, chief construction engineer of Columbia Broadcasting Co., and Clyde Hunt, chief engineer of WJSV, acting as hosts, explained the intricacies of the amplification and transmission of the programs received from the Washington studios of WJSV by telephone. There were countless safety devices and delicate-looking instruments with long and complicated technical names.

I can't tell it their way, so, with apologies for being a mere woman, I'll explain it in mine.

As we looked over the rail into a small arena below, we saw in the center, something resembling the manual of a pipe organ, with buttons and little red, green and white lights in place of keys. Two men sat within its semicircle and watched the lights which told things about frequencies and watts and amplifiers and so forth. Forming the opposite wall of the little arena were dark green cages. Some of them had sounds coming out as though the animals inside were hungary. But they weren't; they were getting all the amperes and filtered water and volts they needed to keep them performing nicely for their ether audience. The doors of the cages, incidentally, won't open even for the head keeper when the electricity is on—they lock automatically so there is no danger of coming in contact with the current harnessed inside.

Transformers, Arcs And Other Equipment

Leaving the main arena, we walked around in back of the cages and there, behind a glass wall, were all the animals themselves. There were transformers, arcs, harmonic filters, rectifiers and quartz crystals—bits of glass that vibrate several million times a second. All had red tape leading from them to cards on the glass wall, giving their names.

From there we went downstairs, where the chief monsters were kept in a cage of their own—the transformers. In the cage with them were two 100-kilowat tubes through which a constant stream of cooled, filtered water was fed to the transmitters upstairs.

We saw the pumps and the blowers that kept the water cool and forced it to circulate, and finally looked in at the air-conditioning plant which warms the building in winter and cools it in summer.

After the inspection tour, several of the guests made recordings for future broadcasts and the buffet luncheon was served.

Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Mrs. Edward R. Seal, the publicity director, were among the guests. Among others were Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Lorraine Good, vice president of the Soroptimists; Miss Emma Buechele, publicity director; Mrs. Lulu Gable Giese, of Pittsburgh, national historian of the National League of American Pen Women; Miss Helen Atwater, editor of the Journal of Home Economics; Miss Katurah Baldwin, business manager of the journal; Miss Ruth Atwater, director of the home economics department of the American Canners Association; Miss Mary Mason, director of women's activities of N. B. C.; Miss Ruth Sheldon, former president of the Home Economics Association; Mrs. Faith Rasmussin, vice president of the Dietetics Association and a member of the Home Economics Women in Business; Miss Ethel Jean Lamonde, secretary treasurer of the Home Economics Women in Business; Miss Malvina Lindsay, woman's page editor of The Post; Miss Martha Ellyn Slabach, food editor of The Post; Babs Lincoln, woman's page editor of the Times-Herald; Vesta Eales, Gertrude Chestnut and Amelia Gude Thomas.

Talks Planned On Suffrage

A program devoted to suffrage for the District has been arranged by S. J. McCathran, chairman of legislation for the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, associate chairman, to be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the board room of the N. E. A. Building.

W. H. Mondell, vice president of the District Suffrage Association, and Sefton Darr, former president of the D. C. Bar Association, will speak on "District Representation," and Guilford Jameson, of the Theodore Noyes Group, and Senator Arthur Capper, on "National Suffrage."

The meeting is open to anyone interested but has been arranged especially for presidents and legislative chairmen of the local P.-T. A. units and for members of the board of managers.

Society to Sponsor Lecture Saturday On Flowers

In view of the growing interest in flower arrangement, an illustrated lecture will be sponsored by the American Horticultural Society at the Sulgrave Club Saturday, to be given by Mrs. Louis B. Fisher, who has charge of the flower arrangements at the Williamsburg Restoration. She will explain with pictures the varied types of flower display used in the buildings there. Most follow closely eighteenth-century models, conforming to the general motif of the restoration, but other displays also will be discussed.

Mrs. Lloyd Shippen and Mrs. Fairfax Harrison are chairmen of the committee arranging for Mrs. Fisher's lecture. The patronesses are Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Lamont Belin, Mrs. Whitman Cross, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Mrs. George R. Harrison, Mrs. Louis Green, Mrs. Fred Finkenstaedt, Mrs. Cecil Lester Jones, Mrs. Henry Leonard, Mrs. W. B. McKnight, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Owen Robert, Mrs. David L. Wing and Miss Bel Gurnee.

This lecture is scheduled as the first of a series of three. The second will be given by B. Y. Morrison, president of the American Horticultural Society, March 19, and the third by Richard K. Webel April 2. Mr. Webel is a New York landscape architect, and won the first scholarship to Rome given by the Garden Club of America. He will talk on developing natural settings for the home.

D. A. R. Committees Prepare for Meet

Committee chairmen in the District Daughters of the American Revolution are holding final meetings and otherwise "winding up" the affairs of their committees in preparation for the State conference to be held at Memorial Continental Hall March 10, 11 and 12. The 33 chairmen, appointed for two-year periods are now retiring. Due to the many golden jubilee projects, extra efforts have been put forth in the chapters and in the committees to do outstanding work, whether among the foreign born, the underprivileged and otherwise uncared-for or to inculcate a love and reverence for the flag, and the Nation.

Mrs. William H. Wagner, chairman of the Junior American Citizens Committee, will hold the last meeting of her committee tomorrow night at the Mayflower. During her term of office she has helped to organize several J. A. C. clubs in schools, churches and settlements. There are now 20 clubs in the District with a membership of approximately 500. About 3,250 J. A. C. clubs are scattered throughout the country. Believing that all girls and boys in the United States, regardless of race, creed or color, are Junior American Citizens, the D. A. R. is endeavoring to give them citizenship training and patriotic education. The children belonging to the District J. A. C. clubs who are cooperative and faithful in attendance are, so far as funds permit, sent to summer camps.

Rubinstein Club

Mrs. Charles Norman Taylor, first vice president of the Rubinstein Club, will entertain the club officers at dinner Monday evening, in her apartment at 903 Maple lane, Silver Spring, Md. The club will hold its regular rehearsal Tuesday evening at 7:45 o'clock at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

Madame Chairman

—by Suzanne

THE VASSAR ALUMNAE of Washington will have a bazaar Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Sidwell Friends School, with Mrs. Waldron Faulkner as chairman.

It will follow a luncheon in which the Wellesley and Vassar Clubs will join that day at the Mayflower Hotel, in honor of Wellesley's president, Miss Mildred H. McAfee, who is a Vassar graduate.

A feature of the bazaar will be a musical program to be presented by Miss Margaret Lambie, Miss Theodora Malone and Miss Lucy Althouse, members of the American National Pipers Guild, who play shepherd's bamboo pipes. This ancient musical instrument, regaining favor in England, was first introduced in Washington by Miss Lambie.

Ushers for the occasion will be a group of Sidwell girls in peasant costumes of various European countries. The benefit is to help raise funds for Vassar's seventy-fifth anniversary endowment campaign.

TEA CANCELED—Due to the illness of Senorita Carmen Baez, third secretary of the Mexican Embassy, for whom it was entertaining this afternoon, the Newspaper Women's Club has canceled the tea it was to have given in her honor at the Raleigh Hotel.

ANOTHER SCRIBE — Among the correspondents in Washington who contribute columns to the papers in their home States, is Mrs. John Kee, wife of Representative Kee, of West Virginia, who writes for 43 papers. She started her column on Washington three years ago and the demand for it has grown steadily.

She attends hearings, press conferences and social affairs at all of which she gathers material, but her work leans toward the serious rather than the frivolous angle in its coverage of the Capital.

MOVIE PROGRAM — Tomorrow night an evening of films will be presented as an Easter program for the international relations committee of the Washington Branch of the A. A. U. W., by Maurice H. Thatcher, first Governor of the Panam Canal Zone and former member of Congress from Kentucky. Mr. Thatcher, who has developed his hobby for motion pictures to an art, will show some of his views of the Near East, Egypt and the Holy Land, Paris, Rome and beautiful colored films of Charleston and Middleton gardens.

During intermission, Maxwell Galloway will sing, accompanied by Mrs. Jean Seaman. Mrs. John Donaldson is chairman of the section. L. H. Cornish will introduce the speaker.

ENTERTAINS ENTERTAINERS—Mrs. John H. Flett, vice president of the New Jersey State Society, last night entertained at her home in Bethesda, the junior entertainment committee of the society. The society has a junior and a senior entertainment group and they function alternately. The juniors are planning a St. Patrick's dance March 15 at the Roger Smith Hotel, Janice Seehusen is chairman.

Vote League Will Honor Mrs. Roosevelt

Many prominent persons have accepted the invitation of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters to attend the annual spring luncheon in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt Friday at the Willard Hotel.

Among the guests will be Mrs. Robert Taft, Mrs. Prentiss Brown, Representative Thomas D'Alesandro, Mrs. Alexander Wiley, Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau; Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters; Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Women's Bureau, and Mrs. Harris Baldwin, vice president of the National League of Women Voters. Among other guests will be Mrs. John Carmody, Mrs. John Ihlder, Mrs. Judson King and Mrs. Elizabeth Cox.

The annual luncheon of the league is given for the purpose of dramatizing the difficulties under which a voteless community labors, and of bringing to public attention conditions in the District and in the world at large that need correction.

The foreign policy skit will indicate some of the conclusions reached by that department in this year's study of developments in Europe and in the Far East. About 50 members of the league, under the direction of Mrs. Charles W. Putnam, will take part in the presentation.

The titleof this year's dramatization is "Life With Stepfather," presenting the pitiful plight of "Little Columbia." Mrs. Henry W. Moore has written the opening and closing scenes of the play. Each of the six departments of the league has prepared a skit dealing with the problems studied during the past year.

Mrs. Van Zandt To Give Another Talk on Orient

In response to many requests, Mrs. Lydia Van Hagan Van Zandt, noted lecturer and world traveler, will give another of her talks on "Women of the Orient," over Station WMAL Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

This program is the sixth in the series of radio broadcasts arranged by the committee of the federation, of which Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, former president of the District federation, is chairman.

Mrs. Van Zandt, who will be introduced by Mrs. Meritt, will have for her subject, "Women of the Philippines."

Dr. Neilson Addresses Club

Dr. Allan Neilson, former president of Smith College, last night addressed the Smith Club of Washington at its dinner meeting at the Kennedy-Warren. He discussed the Committeeon Organization of Peace, of which he is the head.

Mrs. Howard S. Wilkinson, vice president, presided in the absence of Mrs. Kenneth Holland, who was ill. Others at the head table were Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mrs. Vernon Brewster, chairman of a recent benefit sponsored by the club; Mrs. Julia Morse, scholarship chairman; Mrs. Clayton Haskell, who was in charge of the dinner, Mrs. Robert W. Wilson, Mrs. James Peake and Miss Ellen Atwater.

SABLE-DYED KOLINSKY SCARFS

Because of the early Easter, furs will play an important part in the fashion picture. A Kolinsky scarf worn with your coat or suit will add a luxurious look that's wonderfully flattering — and dyed the rich, brown sable color, it will blend beautifully with all the new Spring shades. These skins are large and full and we have them made up into three, four and five-skin scarfs.

All's Quiet On District Crime Front

Not a Holdup Man Stirring Although 60 Suspects Go Free In Police Line-up

An audience of 60 victims failed to identify any of 60 suspects paraded before them in a police lineup last night as participants in Washington's recent wave of crime. Nevertheless the city's crime front remained remarkably quiet.

At midnight the city was well on its way to enjoying a second night without a single armed holdup. It was 30 hours since the last robbery at the point of a gun had taken place. This was the first time this year that there was such a dearth of crime.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, credited the crime abatement to the reinforcements he has added to the night force. Last night, as on Monday night, 125 additional patrolmen were on District streets.

Maj. Brown Elated

Elated over the results Maj. Brown declared yesterday that the night force will remain large for a while.

"Criminals don't like to see policemen on the streets," said the major, reporting that he went out Monday night to see the policemen on the job.

He explained the Police Department has no funds for adding to its personnel. The night staff is being augmented by shifting day men to night work, and by having the men work overtime.

Indicating what it means to have more men on the job police last night reported that within two minutes after screams were heard in the 1600 block of Q street northwest, a police officer was at the scene. (Police found no crime connected with the screaming.)

The whole crime situation that has resulted in augmenting the night patrol force will be discussed at a crime conference, which the Board of Commissioners last night set for 10 a. m. Saturday in the District Building. Police officials and prosecutors will join the Commissioners. It was announced the meeting will be attended by all police officials "from captains up." A representative of David A. Pine, district attorney, and Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal are expected to attend.

Hazen Seeks Remedy

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen has proposed that the conference consider methods of coping with the increase in robberies, housebreakings and petty thefts in the last month.

Lieut. John H. Fowler, of the police robbery squad, directed the line-up at police headquarters last night. In groups of eight he had prisoners step out on a brilliantly lighted stage—so illuminated that the suspects could not see the men and women examining them.

Almost all of the 60 persons in the audience were victims or witnesses of recent crimes. But each was on the lookout for a man who matched his mental picture of "his" criminal.

When the line-up was over, audience reaction remained entirely negative. Not one suspect had been identified.

"We'll ask these people to come back the next time we have a batch of suspects," said Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of detectives, "and we hope they will cooperate."

Four Carried Guns

The roundup of suspects yesterday raised the arrest total to nearly 150 since Herman Sirkis, 42, liquor store proprietor, was killed in a holdup in his establishment at 4824 Deane avenue northeast on February 28.

Men taken into custody early yesterday had four guns in their possession. None of the weapons, however was .38 caliber, the size of the gun which was used to kill Sirkis.

D. C. Crime Laid In Part to Lack Of Child Care

Lack of proper supervision of subnormal and delinquent children was held partially to blame for Washington's crime record yesterday by Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the District Training School, which was inspected by Representative D'Alesandro, jr., of Maryland.

Dr. Lewald told D'Alesandro that if such children were sent to a home suited to their needs rather than to a correctional institution or left to roam the streets that the District's crime rate would be lowered.

Preparing to conclude his welfare inquiry with a visit to the Industrial Home School for Colored Children at Blue Plains today, D'Alesandro said he may ask the United States Public Health Service to make an inspection of the training school at Laurel, Md.

The chairman of the subcommittee investigating welfare conditions said that the Laurel institution, next to the Home for the Aged and Infirm, is most in need of improvements.

D'Alesandro said that larger quarters to relieve overcrowding and a new school building to replace obsolete units are the outstanding needs at the training school.

District to Share In $5,000,000,000

The National Capital will draw an important share of the country's anticipated outlay of $5,000,000,000 for motor travel in 1940, according to members of the travel development committee of the National Touring Board of the American Automobile Association, now in session in Washington.

Washington's growing attraction as a tourist center will place the city on the itinerary of millions of motorists this summer, according to the A. A. A. executives.

Federation of Citizens Associations Marks Its 30th Anniversary With Banquet

Henry I. Quinn Addresses Gathering Of 300 Delegates

More than 300 members and guests observed the thirtieth anniversary of the Federation of Citizens Associations at a banquet in the Mayflower Hotel last night, and heard the story of the organization's development from a handful of scattered units to an assembly representing 65 affiliates and more than 40,000 voteless District citizens.

Henry I. Quinn, former president of the Bar Association, onetime member of the Board of Education, and a leader in the early days of the federation, told the delegates and members they could well be proud of Washington, despite the attacks on life in the Capital published in recent periodicals.

"When we compare the record of Washington with that of other cities, we find that we have no reason to hang our heads in shame.

"We have had millions spent here on streets and parks, recreation and public buildings, yet neither Congressional investigations nor the Federal Bureau of Investigation has ever found graft."

Quinn urged suffrage proponents to seek the vote as a "basic American right" and not with the idea that Washington was "the most terrible of cities."

Senators Praised

A native who remembers "when you could row a boat down Pennsylvania avenue during certain seasons of the year," Quinn declared that the very presence of a Federation of Citizens Associations was proof that the District had a "soul" and that its citizens, despite the lack of suffrage, had "guts."

He praised the "sympathetic attitude" of the Senate District Committee toward District affairs, especially Senator King, of Utah, chairman of the committee, and Senator Capper, of Kansas, senior minority member, both of whom were given an ovation by the delegates.

"If you had elected representatives in Congress and elected officials in the District, you would not get from them so sympathetic an ear as from Senators King and Capper," asserted Quinn.

The bar leader observed that the District government was "about" to be reorganized on the basis of the "kitchen cabinet's" plan as adopted by the Commissioners.

"Four years ago," he recalled, "I served as a member of the 'parlor cabinet' which also drew up a reorganization plan. Well, it was given to the Commissioners, and for two years it lay collecting dust in the desk of one of the Commissioners.

"About to Be Reorganized Again"

"Suddenly the President, it was announced, determined to do something about District reorganization. So he reappointed a Commissioner who had resigned (Commissioner George Allen) to carry out the job. The Commissioner had an interview with Representative Kennedy, of the House District Committee, and averred something was going to be done, according to newspaper report.

"Then the first thing you know the Commissioner fell into the hands of the 'kitchen cabinet.' And now we're 'about' to be reorganized again."

Jesse C. Suter, a past president, told how "territorial jealousies" had prevented creation of a federation until March 5, 1910. Participating in the first meeting of April 16, 1910, were delegates of Anacostia, Brightwood Park, Chevy Chase, Northwest Suburban, Congress Heights, East End Suburban, Ivy City, Lanier Heights, Northeast Suburban, Park View, Petworth, Randle Highlands, Southeast Takoma Park, Tenleytown, Congress Heights Public Improvement Association, Washington Chapter of American Institute of Architects, and Washington Society of Fine Arts.

Other speakers were Harry N. Stull, federation president; James A. Crooks, general chairman of arrangements, and Culver B. Chamberlain, president, Cathedral Heights Cleveland Park Citizens Association.

Honor guests included Senators King and Capper, Representative Bates, of Massachusetts Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president, Board of Education; Riley E. Elgen, chairman, Public Utilities Commission; Miss Katharine Overton, daughter of Senator Overton, of Louisiana; Louis L. Bowdler, president, Federation of Businessmen; Fred W. Gast, president, Interfederation Conference; Gen. Charles W. Kutz, former Commissioner, and the following past presidents: Suter, Edward F. Colladay, James G. Yaden, Thomas Ellis Lodge and L. A. Carruthers.

Two Legion Groups Celebrate Their 21st Anniversaries

Washington Post, No. 1, Was First Formed In Country and Helped Launch National Organization; Senator Gurney Speaks

Twenty - first birthday parties were held last night by two American Legion organizations, Washington Post No. 1 and Sergt. Jasper Unit No. 13, American Legion Auxiliary.

The history of Washington Post, first Legion post to be founded, and its part in organizing the national organization was read at the post meeting at 2108 Sixteenth street northwest by Past Commander Howard S. Fiske, who presided at the meeting.

Principal speaker at the auxiliary unit meeting was Washington I. Cleveland, local director of the American Automobile Association. The unit met at the Raleigh Hotel.

Senator Gurney, of South Dakota, told Post No. 1 of his bill to extend to widows, orphans and wives of disabled or unemployed veterans the privilege of retaining WPA jobs longer than the statutory limit of 18 months, a privilege already enjoyed by veterans themselves.

Other speakers at the post meeting were Col. DeFrees Larner, Air Service Reserve, and Commander Leland P. Lovette, Navy Department press officer.

Cleveland outlined at the unit meeting, the A. A. A. eight-point legislative program for traffic safety.

The A. A. A. opposes the proposed increase in the gasoline tax, he said.

Clarkson Named Business Manager Of Cathedral

Walter Beaumont Clarkson, vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., has been named business manager of the Washington Cathedral, officials announced yesterday.

CLARKSON

Successor to Edwin N. Lewis, who resigned to accept a public relations post in Wilmington, Del., Clarkson expects to take over his new position on May 1.

Native of Farquier County, Va., Mr. Clarkson entered the employ of the Bell System in 1897; he followed that work in Pittsburgh for eight years, subsequently being stationed in Baltimore, Md., for three years before coming here in 1921. He lives at 3120 Woodley road northwest.

Mr. Clarkson, who was educated at William and Mary College, George Washington and National universities, will have charge of the business management of the cathedral offices, publications and social activities.

Man Killed, 2 Children Hurt by Cars

Traffic Deaths For 1940 Now 11; 'Crash Squad' Urged for City

A 56-year-old pedestrian was killed and two children were hurt yesterday as a coroner's jury prepared to investigate the traffic deaths of two other Washingtonians last month. Yesterday's fatality raised the 1940 toll to 11 as compared with 18 last year.

Meanwhile, the commander of the police traffic division, Capt. Milton D. Smith, urged creation of a "crash squad" to make a thorough inquiry into every traffic accident in an effort to determine causing factors and methods of prevention.

Heywood Hazzard, colored, of 1511 Sixth street northwest, died in Freedmen's Hospital after he was struck at Sixth and O streets northwest by an auto, which, police said, was driven by Henry S. Washington, 29, of 467 N street northwest. Washington was released in the custody of his attorney.

2 Children Injured

A 10-year-old orphan, Arthur Hall, of the German Orphan Home, Anacostia, suffered leg injuries when struck by a car as he crossed Good Hope road at Sixteenth street southeast. Driver of the vehicle, according to police, was Edgar S. Tippett, 34, of 44 Buchanan street northeast. Joseph L. Scott, colored, 4, of 478 O street northwest, chased a ball into the street in front of his home and was struck by a car driven by Lawrence Pruitt, 28, of Greenbelt, police said. He was treated by a physician for shoulder injuries.

A coroner's jury today will investigate the traffic deaths of Taft Jack Moy, colored, 28, of 403 L street southeast, and James Powell, colored, 22, of 4700 Benning road northeast.

Both men died at Casualty Hospital of injuries suffered last month. Moy was struck in the 1200 block Eleventh street southeast, February 12, and died of head injuries the same day. The second victim suffered a fractured spine when the truck he was operating collided with an automobile at Tenth and F streets northeast, February 26.

Drivers to Appear

Police named Matthew J. Butler, 24, of 61A L street southeast, as the driver of the machine which knocked down Moy, and Lewis F. Hunter, 23, of 710 Quincy street northwest, as the operator of the automobile in the Powell accident, and said they would appear at the inquests.

As a first line of defense against the annual toll of traffic casualties, Washington needs a modern, fully equipped accident prevention and investigation squad, in the opinion of Capt. Smith.

Recently returned from a two-week training course at Northwestern University's traffic institute, Capt. Smith is preparing a list of recommended changes in the traffic setup to be submitted to Maj. Ernest W. Brown.

Like every other city which has successfully combatted traffic evils, Smith feels Washington should establish a policy of painstaking investigation of every reported crash—not alone fatal mishaps.

"It is only by an accurate understanding of how and why accidents are happening that we can hope to prevent them," said Smith.

In his report to Maj. Brown, Smith said he would urge immediate steps to organize a "crash squad" along modernized lines as proposed by experts at the Northwestern traffic clinic.

"This, however, cannot be done until we have proper equipment and adequate personnel," Smith said.

Kodak Company Sues for Patents On Film Dyes

What doubtless will be known as the "whatchacallit case" was filed in District Court yesterday by the Eastman Kodak Co., of Rochester.

The firm was aggrieved because it purchased the rights to a series of dyes used in making photo films, from Leslie G. S. Brooker, and was unable to obtain patents from Commissioner Conway P. Coe, who was named defendant.

All the dyes had names like "a 2.2'-dialkylselonotsricarbocyanine p-toluenesulfonate," except one, which had no name at all. The complaint asks that Coe be compelled to issue patents.

Emperor Dugan, Tossed to Zoo's Jackass Kin, Has a Peck of Fun

Dugan is the name, Emperor Dugan if you please, and if you don't think he knows his noblesse oblige you should have seen him upholding his dignity yesterday when he was tossed to the jackasses and they began pecking at him.

A genuine emperor penguin, first ever to come to Washington's Zoo, Dugan reached the Capital yesterday, the very first dividend of Uncle Sam's expedition to Antarctica to make an American landfall. And the way he behaved, when placed among the Zoo's four jackass penguins, led a keeper to remark:

"Ah, every inch an emperor!"

The proud bird, member of the biggest of all 17 species of penguins, was captured several weeks ago on an Antarctic ice floe by Malcolm Davis, keeper of the Zoo's birdhouse, who at present is a member of the Byrd expedition. With the aid of three other members of the party, including Pat Dugan, Davis lassoed the bird near the spot, where the ship North Star touched the ice barrier in seeking a landing at the West Base.

Dugan, as he was subsequently named, was taken to Valparaiso, Chile, aboard the North Star and then was transshipped to New York on the Grace liner Santa Clara in custody of Melville Voge, third officer.

When the liner docked yesterday, Frank O. Lowe, assistant head keeper of the National Zoological Park, was waiting to escort Dugan to Washington by train.

"I obtained permission," said Lowe, "to put the crate on the train's rear platform, which was cool, the way Dugan likes his weather. I sat in the coach of the rear car and went out on the platform frequently to see how he was doing. He behaved beautifully."

Dugan's deportment was equally good on the long voyage from Chile, according to the ship's officers. He occupied a refrigerated room, enjoyed a good appetite (3 pounds of fish daily) and capitvated passengers and crew.

Upon being introduced yesterday to the four distant cousins who will be his roommates from now on, Dugan bore himself with the dignity befitting the name of his species. The jackass penguin quartet, however, seemed somewhat resentful of the newcomer, braying harshly when he got too close.

Dugan, however, amused himself by pecking, more in curiosity than in anger, at the reflection of himself in the cage's plateglass.

According to Lowe, the handsome specimen weighs 50 pounds, is 30 inches tall and still is growing. At maturity he is expected to weigh 70 pounds and be 3½ feet tall.

His shirt front is a rich lemon to orange color instead of the jackasses' white, and his head black with orange areas on each side. And, for all anyone knows, "he" may be a "she," for the sex of living penguins cannot be told.

Illegal Deer Slaying Brings $74 Penalty

Special Dispatch to The Post

Woodstock, Va., March 5.—Pleading guilty to the out-of-season slaying of a deer in the upper Vance Cove of Shenandoah County, Louis Wood was fined $25 and costs of $9.23 in trial justice court here yesterday and assessed replacement of the deer, $40. In addition, his hunting license was revoked for one year.

Citizens Ask Race Track In District

North Cleveland Park Dickman Emphasize Association Hears Revenue Possibility

North Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night reiterated its stand of several years ago in favor of a District race track.

J. B. Dickman, jr., president of the association, leaving the chair to take part in the discussion, pointed to estimates that the track would yield $1,000,000 or more in revenue, derided fears of an influx of race track followers.

Z. A. Jones said there were limitations as to sources from which revenue should be derived.

"The easier you make it for people who can least afford to throw their money away, the more they will do it," he said. "We've got to think about the less fortunate people who can't resist temptation, and not merely about ourselves."

William A. Walsh said: "There is no reason why Maryland should be permitted to get all this revenue from racing, and the District none."

The association also voted to send letters to the board of education and District Commissioner to urge that future school sites be selected away from arterial highways and commercial zones. This motion by Dickman was prompted by discussion of the proposal for building of the Sears Roebuck store at Albemarle street and Wisconsin avenue northwest in the vicinity of Janney School.

Dickman said "it doesn't show foresight by the Board of Education" to select sites where children may be subjected to increased traffic. Jones joined in criticism of building schools near property already in commercial zones.

The association adopted Dickman's resolution to "go on record indorsing Senator Neely's bill which would give District of Columbia citizens the right to bring civil suits in the U. S. District Court against citizens of other States."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Only Nine Days Remain To See 'Gone With Wind'

Mitchell Epic to End Run After Seven Weeks; 'Northwest Passage' Is Impressive Film; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE WIRE I found reposing on the immaculate drama desk yesterday states that upon the conclusion of its seventh and final week at Loew's Palace Theater, David O. Selznick's prodigious picturization of Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" will have been viewed by approximately — the telegram omitted that word—a quarter of a million Washington theatergoers. That seems to work out mathematically, even if my mathematical bump is a dent.

BELL

Three performances a day for 49 days seems to make a total of 147 showings. With a seating capacity of 2,400—give or take a few seats one way or the other—the Palace could have accommodated 352,800 patrons for the run of the picture. I dare say it came within 100,000 of that figure. Carter Barron, Eastern division manager of Loew's, Inc., dares say the same thing.

But the point is that "Gone With the Wind" is coming off at close of business a week from tomorrow night, Thursday, March 14. Counting today, there remain nine days in which those who have not seen the Academy Awards sweepstakes winner may do so. It is practically axiomatic that the same number of days remain for those who have seen it once and wish to see it again. "Gone With the Wind" is one of those colossal things that can hardly be completely encompassed with one viewing.

Barring a sudden change of mind on the part of the Loew executives—superinduced by a surging demand of the populace to "catch" the Mitchell-Selznick epic while it is still "hot"—it will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmization of Kenneth Roberts' story of "Northwest Passage" that will succeed "Gone" on the Palace screen, come March 15. We have just sat through a preview screening of this inspiring subject and it fulfills every dimension of what is colloquilly referred to as a "star-spangled wow." During the early sequences of the picture there are times when one begins to fret lest nothing is going to happen beyond a supreme willingness on the part of Maj. Robert Rogers and his Rangers to wallow around through bogs in pursuit of the 1759 Indians —a date, not a count. But by the time it is over, "Northwest Passage" has added up to one of the most impressive films we have seen in many a long day and night of screen-gazing. It is a picture of overwhelming strength. And executed entirely in Technicolor, which doesn't do it any harm, either. Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan and Ruth Hussey are the king and queen pins of the cast.

But it doesn't end there. If this demise of "Gone" and the incoming of "Northwest" prove to be on the level—and it is strictly up to the public—then the Palace will begin to unfurl its banners in behalf of the Joads in John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath," "Rebecca," Mickey Rooney in "Young Tom Edison;" Clark Gable and Joan Crawford in "Strange Cargo" and divers and sundry, as the saying goes, other pumpings-up of the blood pressure—if any.

And speaking of such reminds me that, as usual, there wasn't time enough after an 11:20 p. m., final Monday night curtain on "The Streets of Paris," at the National, to pay off the whole sum of audience indebtedness. In addition to the paucity of time, there was a scarcity of space. That is how Ward and Van came to be left out of the revue's review's eventual summation. Mr. Ward and Mr. Van—and I couldn't for the life of me tell you which is which—do a stint on harp and violin that is one of the chief reasons they had to sweep us up out of the aisle. Sorry the typewriter missed them the first time around.

It may be recalled that there have been some recent chirpings here anent the coming of John Garfield, Aline MacMahon and Harry Carey to the National in "Heavenly Express." Others now announced for the cast of the new Bein play include Philip Loeb, Art Smith, Harry Bratsburg, Phil Brown and Will Lee, all of whom are currently laboring in the Group Theater's production of Clifford Odets' "Night Music," scheduled to put up the shutters this Saturday night. So now you know.

That profligate acreage of multicolored type that was wheeled into the department a day or so ago was a miniature 24-sheet blurb on behalf of the Warner Brothers' production of "Virginia City," costarring Errol Flynn and Miriam Hopkins. It seems that Virginia City was where Mark Twain won his spurs as a reporter on the Territorial Enterprise; where the town's loveliest demimondaine was a member of the volunteer fire department—of all things; horses were shod with silver shoes, silver being a worthless by-product of gold, etc., etc., ad lib and infinitum. More of this later. It seems to be worth it.

Spirit-Is-Willing-But-Flesh-Is-Weak Note.

Yes, we are not going to the Virginia City premiere of "Virginia City" on March 16. But we could be bribed!

In Hollywood

Hollywood, March 5.

Gorgeous Korjus, whom you liked so much in "The Great Waltz" is about to do another musical at Metro, written by Vicki Baum. She was by way of being a sensation in Palm Springs where she sang "Tales from the Vienna Woods" and wore a dress from the picture, trimmed with paradise feathers, those being about the only ones left in pictures that the Federal agents didn't confiscate—which is a story in itself. It seems a Washington higher-up is a great bird lover, and they looked up an old law which says unless you can prove aigrettes and paradise feathers were bought prior to 1914, they can be taken away from you and burned. And a clean sweep has been made of all the studios in Hollywood

Paramount was the hardest hit because they bought out the supply in the old days for Mae West and Marlene Dietrich. They had about $45,000 worth of paradise and almost the same amount of aigrettes. So unless you want your paradise snatched from your head, just keep it under glass, and look at it lovingly and longingly to remind you of the good old days. And remember, you can't have your paradise (even though it is only a bird) in Hollywood.

And speaking about Korjus reminds me that the other day while I was roaming about the Metro lot, I found myself in a projection room where they were running off "Wild Orchids," one of that studio's hits 12 years back. Featured Greta Garbo, Nils Asther and Lewis Stone. Studio was showing it to Korjus so she could observe Garbo's technique and timing, as the biggies out there consider her just about perfect.

Of those three stars, Garbo is better than ever; Lewis Stone has stepped out of his sophisticated dancing shoes and into the comfortable house-slippers of "Judge Hardy." Only Nils Asther is missing. Which is too bad, 'cause he had everything . . . Understand his little daughter, Evelyn, is being taught "show business" by her mama, Vivian of the Duncan sisters.

Well, our extra situation grows daily more complicated. The Junior Guild members tell me they don't want to pull away from the parent Guild, nor do they want their rights ignored. They only want the right to work. One of the boys who made the most money last year was told by Central Casting that they felt he wasn't justified in getting any more work. So he hasn't had a call from that organization in over 4 months.

Principals in Van Dine Mystery Thriller

TOP-FLIGHTERS IN "CALLING PHILO VANCE"

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 5.

JOHN N. GARNER: Last week's newspapers announced that Al Smith's name would be included in the list of your delegates for the New York primaries. Smith denies this. He doesn't want to be a delegate. He doesn't think you've got a chance . . . Serge Koussevitzky: The American Federation of Musicians is starting to move against your Boston Symphony Orchestra—the only nonunion symphony orchestra in America. They've already notified the Victor Recording Co., that when your current recording contract expires, you'll have to use union musicians—or else no union members ever will make Victor recordings . . . Diana Barrymore: When a customer hissed Elaine Barrie at "My Dear Children" last week, your father ad libbed a challenge to come up and fight.

F. D. R.: This is one sidelight of Herbert Hoover's appearance in Washington last week, to plead for relief to Poland . . . If you had been in Washington at the time, Hoover never would have made that appearance before Congress. The former President always had insisted that he'd never visit Washington, for any purpose, while you're there—because he wanted to avoid a White House call . . . He made the trip, when he was assured that you would be away on vacation.

HJALMAR PROCOPE: Bernt Balchen, who is buying supplies for your Finnish government, confided a few days ago that he has purchased guns which may be outlawed—but that the cause is too great, to worry about legalities . . . Paramount Films: Dorothy Lamour will enter a New York hospital next week, under an assumed name . . . Bert Lahr: Ray Bolger, who appeared with you in "The Wizard of Oz," flew back to Hollywood Sunday night—in the midst of his engagement at the Chez Paree—because his father died.

FERENC MOLNAR: Because Burgess Meredith, who will portray the title role in Vinton Freedley's production of your "Liliom," is so much shorter than Ingrid Bergman, Nat Karson will resort to a number of tricks in designing the sets and clothes, to make Meredith appear taller . . . He'll wear built-up heels, while Miss Bergman will be bare-footed. She'll wear a kerchief tied around her hair, and tucked under her chin—while Meredith's clothes will have slanted pockets, and will be cut at an up-angle, to give the illusion of height. For the love-scenes on the park-bench, Karson has designed a special bench, one side higher than the other.

ELSA MAXWELL: Dorothy Parker probably will welcome your return to Hollywood, and the assurance of at least one good party. When she was invited to a party given by a dull host, Dorothy phoned Ruth Chatterton, who was going there and said: "We'll call for you—in our Tumbril." . . . Jack Warner: Contrary to all West Coast reports, John Garfield won't be back at your studio for a long time. His new show, "Heavenly Express," is being financed by the Shuberts . . . John Perona: Billy Leeds, the Tin-Plate King, just presented a $4,000 Chris-Craft to your son, Edwin . . . Lord Lothian: The historic town of Williamsburg, Va., which you visited recently, will have a new tunnel built under the main highway, to divert the traffic of non-visitors. John D. Rockefeller, jr., will build it.

ROERT H. JACKSON: In a recent attack on J. Edgar Hoover, a photo was used showing him wearing a paper hat, at the Stork Club. That picture was taken four years ago on New Year's Eve. I was with him then and, as is his custom, he wouldn't touch a drop. He merely was celebrating, as was all America, the advent of a New Year . . . If Hoover is a "Stork Club Detective" then Jim Farley is a Monte Carlo Postmaster, Bill Bullit a Monte Carlo Ambassador, Alfred M. Landon is a Jack & Charlie's politician, Frank Murphy an El Morocco jurist, Henry Morgenthau, jr., an El Morocco Treasurer and Tom Girdler is a Versailles industrialist—because I've seen them at those places.

BILLY LIVINGSTON: John Barrymore will make an unheralded appearance on the "Society Girl" broadcast series, for which you and Elaine Barrie now work. Barrymore was scheduled to slip into the program, unannounced, last week—but was indisposed . . . Will Hays: Harold Clurman, who directed Odets' "Night Music," wrote a long article for the Sunday Times and attacked the critics for comparing Odets first with Chekhov and now with Saroyan. The Times cut one sentence from his piece! "Criticism of this type will end by sending everyone to Hollywood, where all writers are the same" . . . Ruth Draper: Jimmy Savo will tour the country, in a one-man pantomime show.

NATIONAL CREDIT ASSOCIATION: Paul Flato, the jeweler whose customers include the best-known names in America, thought of a noval way of reminding his elegant customers that they still owe him some money . . . Flato, who is a Texan by birth, arranged to pose for Hal Phyfe, the photographer, and to have pictures taken showing him wearing a 10-gallon hat and armed with two pistols . . . The photo was to be captioned: "Pay Up—Or Else." . . . Flato's attorneys couldn't see the humor of this, and persuaded him to drop the idea—because it might be considered criminal extortion.

Valerie Parks Scores Again At the Gayety

Current Week's Show Combines Comedy And Femme Display

The times are few and far between when a show comes to town with such an array of fine entertainers as make up the cast of this week's bill at the Gayety Theater.

"Scan-Dolls" is one of those exceptional shows in which each member, from the lovely Valerie Parks to the stunning and well-trained chorus, works hard and with a will to perform at his best. The results speak for themselves.

Heading the bill is the blonde and enchanting Valerie, a local favorite and one of burlesque's ranking female stars. Miss Parks offers several of her inimitable beauty parades wearing, as usual, a lavish and appropriate wardrobe.

Funny Mike Sachs and his capable coworker, Alice Kennedy, are funnier in the current bill than we've ever seen them. Offering a few of the typical Sachs skits, Mike presents several new and amusing comedy numbers.

No less effective in his comedy work is "Coo-Coo" Morrissey. This chap is steadily improving and the fine work he does in the current bill is, we hope, a forerunner of stellar accomplishment in the future.

Herbie Barris is rapidly earning the reputation of being one of the most versatile lads on the circuit. Barris, always a clever straight man and a valuable asset to any production, proves his ability as a comedian in several skits.

On the girlie side of the bill are such stunners as Helen Colby, Dottie Darling and Leona Jackson. Miss Darling, blonde and charming, is seen to advantage in several musical specialties, while the acrobatic dancing of Miss Jackson is unusually well executed.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Hollywood, March 4 (INS).—I hope Arthur Hornblow's negotiations with Danton Manfredo for the "The Life of Pope Pius XI" are successful. The asking price is $75,000 and the present Pontiff has given his approval of the story which is based on biography of this great Catholic leader. With the world in its present state of turmoil and hatred, it seems fitting that such a picture should be made now for the late Pope worked unceasingly for world peace.

His memory will live in the hearts, not only of the Roman Catholics, but of all who appreciated his efforts for world peace. Those of us who were fortunate enough to have had an audience with him will never forget his fine spiritual face and his gentle bearing. Born Achille Ratti, of poor people, his rise to the place at the head of the great church is filled with drama and interest and Paramount should be able to produce an inspiring picture.

The Warner publicity lads couldn't be happier over Marie Wilson's return. They love her. Although she's been gone a year, she sent them a fully equipped Christmas tree and kept in touch with them all the time she was away. Marie returns for the feminine lead in "Flight Eight" and I'll be surprised if she and Nick Grinde don't take that march to the altar that has been so long delayed. He has been carrying the torch for her ever since she left town and Marie has spent a fortune in long-distancing him, so why the delay? Take it from me, Marie isn't as dumb as the parts she plays. The girl has her head on her shoulders all the time. Her dumb attitude is only an act.

Word comes from Movita, the Mexican movie actress and her bridegroom, the singing fighter Jack Doyle. Jack, you'll remeber, was deported and ordered out of the country. Movita, at that time, was Monogram's star and was doing very well as an actress, but love was more important to her than a career, so she joined the spectacular Doyle in England. They've been touring the country, making records, and they write that the Irish thrush is up for a part in the George Bernard Shaw play "Major Barbara."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The newest and cutest twosome in town is Judy Garland and Robert Stack, who were bowling at the Hollywood Recreation Center. Apparently Bob's heart doesn't entirely belong to Cobina Wright, jr.; Dorothy Lamour is headed for Florida to rest for a tonsilectomy; Mrs. James Roosevelt made her first night-club appearance in Hollywood Saturday at the Victor Hugo with her brother and lawyer. She refused to pose for cameramen; Mickey Rooney has himself a new girl—Rita Quigley, no less, 16-year-old sister of Juanita; Hollywood is finding the news of the romance between Shipwreck Kelly and Brenda Frazier extremely interesting; the Samuel Goldwyns are hosting a big party in honor of the Averill Harrimans; Ray Goetz had such a bad cold when he arrived from New York a few days ago, his friends feared pneumonia.

Vic Orsatti and Helen Gilbert, with eyes only for each other, in a ringside seat at Slapsy Maxies; William Powell stopping to give the new Mrs. Herbert Marshall (Lee Russell) a big kiss at Ciro's. While Bart and Lee were at one table, the other bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Nat Wolff (Edna Best), the former Mrs. Marshall, were seated nearby. Bill's bride, wearing the cutest trick of a flowered chapeau; Mrs. Freeman Gosden, who has been very ill, is out again and has gone to Palm Springs to recapture; Marjorie Weaver and Walter Brooks 3d, at the Beachcombers tete a tete; Mrs. Milton Bren, who broke her leg at Sun Valley, went back there the first day she had the cast off. I call that courage. She's with the Darryl Zanucks; Elsa Maxwell visited the farmer's market and bought out the place. She ordered enough food to feed the starving armenians.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Orlando, Fla., March 5.—A not-too-imaginary interview with Mr. Clark Griffith in the Eugene O'Neill manner:

And now, Mr. Griffith, just how do you rate this 1940 ball team of yours?

"A purty good ball team, I'd say. There are a lot of things I like about this Washington ball team (Yes, and there are a lot of things about it I don't like)."

You'd say, then, that you have a chance for the pennant, Mr. Griffith?

"Of course we have a chance for the pennant. A lot of things can happen in this race (I hope most of 'em happen to the Yankees. A few broken legs on the Yankees would balance the league very nicely)."

Why do you think so highly of your ball club?

"Wa-al, it reminds me of my 1924 team (that's no lie. They'll wear gray uniforms on the road and white ones at home, just like that '24 club. They'll use wooden bats and round balls and play in spiked shoes)."

That 1924 team was your best club we presume, Mr. Griffith?

"I don't know if we looked any better in the spring of 1924 than we do now." (Why Mr. Griffith, how you do go on.)

You are counting on your young ball players, of course.

"Of course I am. We've got the best crop of young rew-kies I ever did see. There's that Sid Hudson, the big pitcher. (Where is he, or, rather what is he? I wish I knew. It isn't in the books for that kid to make good with only Class D experience.")

You're counting on Hudson then?

"'Course we're counting on him. Anybody who can win 24 games in any kind of a league figures to help us. (But I wish he had won 'em in something better than a Class D league. I could probably win 24 games myself against those bushwhacker hitters in that league.")

And as for your other young pitchers?

"I'm not worried about them. (It's Bucky Harris' worry. That's what I'm paying him for.")

Who are these young pitchers you're counting on, Mr. Griffith?

"Wa-al, there's a lot of good ones. I think that big Paul Gehrman will (if he ever finds that control he misplaced somewhere in the minor leagues). This Williams we bought from Chattanooga is no green pea. He was up with the Athletics (and down again). I haven't given up on Early Wynn yet (but I'm beginning to weaken) and Bucky Jacobs reminds me quite a bit of Tommy Bridges (except that he doesn't have a fast ball which was the best thing about Bridges)."

We take it you are all set behind the plate, Mr. Griffith?

"All set, that's right. Nothing the matter with our catching (nothing the matter with our catching except that Rick Ferrell doesn't hit much and can't run; Jake Early can run and hit but can't catch much and you may have the others)."

You were saying something about a better hitting club?

"We've got the hitters (but will they hit? I hope Walker does better than that .292 at Chicago last year and Travis hits better than his .294 last season). I'm not worried about our hitting. (That's another one of Harris'.")

How about the shift of Buddy Lewis from third base to rightfield?

"That will help us. We need Lewis' hitting in there. No reason why Lewis shouldn't be a good outfielder. (No reason except that a lot of other good ball players have tried to change positions and turned out to be flops in their new jobs. We're sunk if Lewis doesn't learn to play the outfield.")

Beg pardon, did you say something about the club being sunk?

"Oh, no, I was just thinking about that report I heard about the British fleet (I've got to be careful here. I didn't realize I was thinking out loud). I allus said those German submarines would knock the ears off those British warships. (Nice work, old boy.")

The papers say you like Wasdell's work around first base.

"Sure I like it. Who wouldn't. That young fellow has arrived. He's beginning to remind me of Hal Chase (Chase had two arms and two legs and parted his hair in the middle just like Wasdell)."

Your're satisfied, we hear, with your $35,000 rookie, Pofahl?

"Perfectly satisfied. He's a real ball player that kid (I hope). If that Mike Kelley in Minneapolis has sold me a package I'll tell what I know about him. I thought he was a bigger kid than he is. Pofahl will be all right (if he can hit, if he can field)."

All in all, then, you're looking for a good season, Mr. Griffith?

"You bet I am (there's no harm in looking)."

Harris Will Start Five Right-Handers

Revises Order of Last Season in Announcing Opening Line-up; Regulars and Rookies Will Clash Tomorrow in First Game

By Shirlev Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., March 5.—A preview of Washington's 1940 batting order, featuring a new emphasis on right-handed hitters, is scheduled for Thursday when the Nats' regulars and rookies will play the first ball game of the training season here.

Owner Clark Griffith will come out of 18 years retirement from active duty on the field to manage the rookies, who have been dubbed the Griffs. Bucky Harris will manage the regulars known in camp as the Harrises.

In announcing the line-up of the regulars today, Harris tipped his hand as far as the Nats' 1940 batting order is concerned. He revealed that, barring upsets, the Nats will open the season with five right-handers in the regular line-up, excluding the pitcher.

Nats Were Top-Heavy

At least Harris hopes that will be the case. For too many years the Nats have been top-heavy with left-handed hitters and an easy mark for southpaw pitching in the league. A year ago, Harris could number only three right-handed swingers in his batting order. He is grateful for the swing to the right.

The change has been achieved by the substitution of the right-handed swinging Jimmy Bloodworth for the left-handed Buddy Myer at second base, and by the acquisition of the right-handed Jimmy Pofahl for the shortstop job.

Only Three Southpaws

The only southpaw swingers who will appear in the Nats' regular line-up according to present plans are Cecil Travis, Buddy Lewis and Jimmy Wasdell. Swinging from the right will be George Case, Pofahl, Gerald Walker, Bloodworth and Rick Ferrell.

Manager Harris and Griffith announced the following line-ups for the intra-squad battle on Thursday:

REGULARS—Welaj, centerfield; Wasdell, first base; Lewis, rightfield; Walker, leftfield; Travis, third base; Bloodworth, second base; Pofahl, shortstop; Early, catcher.

ROOKIES—Leip, second base; Robertson, shortstop; Ortiz, leftfield; Gedeon, centerfield; Sanford, first base; Mellendeck, rightfield; Minsal, third base; Giuliani, catcher.

Neither Harris nor Griffith were ready to name their pitchers for the battle. They will choose from all of the pitching crop with the

Blair Bows To Roosevelt Five, 27-17

Counselman's Shot, 35 Seconds to Go, Wins for Purple In Metro Tourney

By Bill Burnett

While more than 4,000 scholastic fans held what breath they had left, Franny Counselman dropped a long, desperate field shot to give Gonzaga a 34-33 victory over St. John's last night as the Metropolitan Scholastic Basketball Tournament got under way at Tech gym.

Coming 35 seconds before the final gun, Counselman's effort gave the Purple the mythical Catholic High championship of the District, last night's being Gonzaga's second victory in three games between the two torrid rivals this season.

In the first half of the opening twin bill, Roosevelt, newly-crowned interhigh titlist, surprised no one when it trampled Montgomery-Blair, of Silver Spring, by a 27-17 count.

Fans Quiet at Start

The crowd, exceeding any previous gathering at Tech this year by almost 1,000, sat comparatively quiet through the first game but there was scarcely a moment in the final game when fans could hear the remarks of their nearest neighbor. As in the last clash between the Catholic clubs, St. John's held leads after the first and second quarters but faded later on.

Young Joe Corrado and Frank Cady, with 4 and 2 points, respectively, set the Johnnies up to a 6-4 lead after the first quarter, and Herby Munhall's efforts stood out as the Claret increased that to 15-11 at the half. At the end of the third session St. John's was still in the van, 23-22, but the usual fireworks that have marked St. John's-Gonzaga meetings for years broke out a moment later.

On the first play of the last quarter and with only five seconds elapsed, Bob Mulvihill gave the Purple its first lead since the opening quarter, 24-23, on a "sneak" shot.

Joe DiMaggio Accepts Yanks' $30,000 Offer

Believed to Be $5,000 Above 1939 Salary; Ends Holdout Problem

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5.—Joe DiMaggio, No. 1 star of the World Champion New York Yankees, accepted the club's terms today, ending the Yanks' last holdout problem.

Notification of DiMaggio's acceptance came to Manager Joe McCarthy by telephone from President E. G. Barrow in New York. No announcement was made of the salary terms, but it is believed here that DiMaggio accepted the club's offer of $30,000, a $5,000 raise over his 1939 salary.

McCarthy also was told that the star outfielder would leave his home at San Francisco early tomorrow morning for the training camp here.

Rolfe Comes Around

Earlier in the day Red Rolfe, holdout third baseman, came to terms for a reported $17,000. He also plans to leave for camp tomorrow from Penacook, N. H.

DiMaggio, the American League's batting champion last season and recipient of the league's "most valuable player" award for 1939, has been one of baseball's most persistent holdouts since he joined the Yankees in 1936.

Experienced Holdout

The following season he returned one contract unsigned and didn't come to terms until March 20, long after training was under way. In 1938 he demanded a raise from $15,000 to $35,000 and remained a stubborn holdout until after the season had started. He finally signed for $25,000, but only after Barrow, then business manager of the club, had served notice that he would have to get into condition at his own expense and would receive no salary until he was ready to play. He appeared in his first game that year April 30.

Last year there was comparatively little "holdout" discussion, but Joe didn't put his name on a contract until March 3, about the time training started.

Bobby Brownell Breaks His Leg In Soccer Game

A chance encounter with a soccer game on the Duke University athletic field in Durham, N. C., yesterday resulted in a broken leg for Bobby Brownell, one of the District's foremost amateur golfers, his father, James V. Brownell, well-known local business man, informed The Post last night.

BROWNELL

Bobby broke his left leg below the knee and will be off the links until late in June. He not only will miss much tourney competition but he will be lost to the Duke golf team throughout its season, severely crippling the Blue Devils.

A member of Indian Springs and Manor clubs in the District, Bobby last fall was acclaimed in several quarters as the Capital's leading amateur golfer. The Duke junior made an impressive showing in the qualifying play of the United States Golf Association championship play in September in Chicago, although he failed to qualify. His father said Bobby had been out getting in a few practice rounds of golf and stopped by the soccer game on his way in. An impromptu game started, and his broken leg was the result.

Mayo Scores Quick Kayo in Gloves Tourney

D. C. Featherweight Finishes Opponent In 32 Seconds

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, March 5.—Gilbert Mayo, blond 126-pound fighter from Alexandria, Va., set some sort record here tonight in the Coliseum as he scored a 32-second knockout over Lawrence Frascella, of Trenton, N. J., to give Washington, D. C., two semifinalists in the Eastern Division of the Golden Gloves boxing tournament.

Danny Petro, who defeated Preston Ferrell, of Newark, Monday night, is the Capital's other representative.

Mayo, badgered by hard luck in his tries for the All-Eastern Gloves squad in 1938 and again last year, himself appeared on the verge of a knockout before he unleashed a bombshell in the form of a left hook that ended the business.

Frascella rushed out and backed Mayo into the ropes with a smashing attack, was driven back and then came forward again. This time it was his waterloo. Mayo measured him calmly and immediately became a favorite to capture the featherweight spot on the Eastern team.

Mayo's knockout, quickest on record in the Gloves matches, topped an evening which saw eight youthful amateurs take the count. Philadelphia qualified five fighters for the semifinals for the lead. Washington was tied with two other cities for fourth place, with only two fighters qualified. Jim Brady, Georgetown University 175-pounder, may get a place on the team. Stanley Goicz, his conqueror Monday, has received a cut eye.

Wood, Burke Enter 4-Ball Finals Today

Smith and Runyan Are Beaten; Laffoon and Metz in Title Round

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., March 5.—Horton Smith, one of the world's great putters, missed a wee one of less than 3 feet today as he and Paul Runyan, last of the seeded teams, faded out of the $5,000 international 4-ball golf tournament.

The ball curled around the cup and hesitated on the lip but didn't go in—and so Dick Metz and Ky Laffoon play Billy Burke and Craig Wood in the finals tomorrow.

Metz and Laffoon both scored birdie fours to beat Runyan and Smith, four-time finalists in the 4-ball, 1 up, after 36 holes.

Wood and Burke came from behind and won from Clayton Heafner and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, 4 and 3, in the other semifinal.

Metz and Laffoon won the tournament two years ago.

Led in Morning

Smith and Runyan, who won the 4-ball in 1934, ended the morning turn 2 up. Metz caught fire as the afternoon round got under way, rapped out a 4-under-par 31 with 5 birdies on the 9-hole stretch, and sent his team 3 up.

The complexion of the match again changed as Runyan's putter blazed once more, and in three holes the match was square.

From there out it was a dog fight. Metz's 30-foot putt for a birdie deuce won the thirty-second hole. On the thirty-fourth Smith sent a 20-footer into the cup to even matters, the way they stayed until the pay-off hole.

Metz and Laffoon, with a pair of 65s, were 12 under par for the day.

Burke Turned Trick

It was Burke, National Open champion in 1931, who beat Harrison and Heafner in the final analysis.

Heafner and Harrison ran up a quick 3-hole lead in the morning, and were still 2 up through the fourteenth, when Burke's consistent iron shots began to tell.

Burke's 20-foot putt for a birdie on the opening hole of the afternoon round sent him and Wood ahead and the next 9 holes were halved.

Burke then sent home a 12-foot putt for a birdie. He and Wood won the thirty-first in par and Burke nailed his approach dead to the thirty-third pin to close out the match.

Wood and Burke set a 9-under-par pace for the match.

Eagles Down Rovers, 7-4, Tie for Second

By Jack Munhall.

Propelled along by the masterful goalkeeping of young Lester Colvin and the sizzling scoring pace of Paul Courteau, the Washington Eagles last night defeated the New York Rovers, 7 to 4, at Riverdale Stadium, to tie them for second place in the Eastern Amateur League.

More than 2,000 fans watched the Eagles display some of the finest hockey of the season in convincingly beating the slipping defending champions. Washington never trailed, leading, 2 to 1, at the end of the first period, and 5 to 3 at the close of the second.

Courteau Collects Credit

To Courteau, the fiery little French Canadian who didn't really start to play hockey until he was on the verge of suspension for fighting, goes a bulk of the credit for the victory which returned the Eagles to second place. Courteau scored three of the Eagles' first four goals, and throughout the fast match proved a difficult man for the Rovers to stop.

Colvin, the 20-year-old who took over Washington's goal tending duties from the veteran Gordon Lee several weeks ago, also turned in a superlative performance. He was credited with 28 saves, 12 of them coming in the final period as the Rovers unleashed a desperate attack to salvage the match.

Although Courteau and Colvin were the big Washington heroes, several other Eagles especially distinguished themselves. Notable were the performances of Defense Len Burrage and Centers Les Ramsay and Kenny Partis. Partis set up the last two Washington goals with his passes to Alan Foster and Bill Cairns, while Ramsay played his usual dogged persistent game.

First Period Is Rough

The Eagles took a 3-1 advantage in an unusually fast and rough opening period that crackled with action. Unlike the past meetings of the Rovers and Eagles, there was plenty of roughing and high-sticking, although Referee Boyd overlooked most of it.

Courteau opened the scoring for Washington at 2:19 when he banged in a follow shot after Germann and Ramsay had placed the puck in scoring position. The Rovers tied the count two minutes later as Pechet grabbed a double pass from Loree and Boucher, but then Washington shot ahead on a second goal by Courteau, at 11:40, and one by Knipfel at 12:21.

Knipfel's goal was one of the most spectacular of the season, delivered inches inside the blue. Taking a pass from Ramsay, the big blond defenseman took a golf swing that sent the rubber traveling goalward

Boston Bruins Top Red Wings, Near Loop Lead

By the Associated Press

Boston, March 5.—Needing every possible point in the battle for the National Hockey League leadership with the New York Rangers, the Boston Bruins threw tremendous power against the weakened Detroit Red Wings and gained a 7-2 victory tonight before 12,000 at the Boston Garden.

That triumph, which wiped out Sunday's setback in Detroit, moved the Bruins to within a half game of Lester Patrick's pace-makers, who have but three more games to play against five for the Stanley Cup titlists.

While piling up their one-sided margin against the Red Wings—who played without Ebbie Goodfellow, their star defenseman, and Eddie Wares—the Bruins rapped in five goals before the visitors scored in rather flukey fashion in the finale.

Little Bobby Bauer topped the Bruins' scorers with two unassisted tallies and Milt Schmidt, the league's leading scorer, celebrated his twenty-second birthday by annexing a goal and an assist that boosted his total to 47 points. The other Boston goalmakers were Roy Conacher, Herb Cain, Dit Clapper and Red Hamill.

Central Athletes Change Nickname; It's 'Vikings' Now

After 40 years of being known by various nicknames—from Blues to Clifton Streeters—Central High athletic representatives henceforth will have an official tag.

They will be called "The Vikings," it was decided yesterday after a vote by the student body.

In a poll conducted by the undergraduate "C" Club for the past few weeks the four most appropriate nicknames were considered. An assembly yesterday brought the voting to an end and the result was announced by Head Coach Hardy Pearce. The name "Vikings" was the particular pet of gridders Jack Wilhelm and Jim Porter.

Florida Eleven Balks as Cody Goes to Temple

Gridders Rebel Against Further Practice Until Coaching Status Clears

By the Associated Press

Gainesville, Fla., March 5.—The University of Florida football squad refused to report for practice today and issued a statement saying players would partcipate in no further spring practice sessions until the coaching situation had been settled.

Head Coach Josh Cody resigned yesterday to accept another position, at Temple University in Philadelphia, and there has been no announcement as to when a successor would be chosen.

Second Term Seen

The players, in their statement left at the athletic office, declared it would be useless to continue further spring practice under the Pittsburgh style of play "if it is not going to be employed again next year," and that should another system be inaugurated there would undoubtedly be a second spring session.

Spring practice began February 5 and was to have lasted six weeks or more.

Cody will come to Temple University as line coach, Director of Athletics Earl R. Yeomans announced in Philadelphia tonight.

Report This Month

His appointment, which was expected, fills out the Owls' varsity football staff. Ray Morrison was named head coach succeeding Fred Swan yesterday and he disclosed Henry Franka, his assistant at Vanderbilt, would accompany him here.

Morrison plans to come here the last week in March to perfect plans for spring practice starting April 1. Frnka and Cody are expected to accompany him. Cody, who served under Morrison at Vanderbilt, went to Florida as head coach in 1936.

'Robby' Carries On for Dodgers

By the United Press

Clearwater, Fla., March 5.—The Dodgers' last link with those madcap days when Uncle Wilbert Robinson was boss of the Brooklyn buffoons is a tall husky Irish lad from Georgia who is a throwback to the time when it wasn't a sin to dust off a hitter.

CASEY

His name is Hugh Casey, and you are going to hear about him in the 1940 National League pennant race. If the Dodgers go any place, Casey is likely to be the chief trail blazer.

Casey came up last season from Memphis for the draft price and made good the hard way. He won a place in Manager Leo Durocher's affections the first time he started a ball game for Brooklyn.

The scene was the Polo Grounds on Decoration Day with 55,000 fans hurling jibes at the Dodgers after the Giants had licked them in the first game of a double-header. Durocher stuck Casey in the box and he slapped down the Giants, 2-1.

At the end of the season only three pitchers—Buckey Walters, Carl Hubbell and Paul Derringer—had a better earned run average than Casey, who won 15 and lost 10, and allowed only 2.93 runs per game.

"Uncle Robbie," the beloved leader of the Dodgers, sent Casey on the way to the big top. After his dismissal at Brooklyn, Robbie became president of the Atlanta Southern Association club and Casey came to his attention through Red Barrow, who coached him at Monroe A. & M. When Judge Bramham declared Casey a free agent in 1933, Uncle Robbie signed him. His big frame, iron nerve and Irish wit won a place in Robbie's heart from the start.

So fond of Casey was Uncle Robbie that after the season he invited the young pitcher to Dover Hall plantation and hunting preserve, where the old Baltimore Oriole hunted, held court and lived the life of a Southern gentleman in winter.

Every morning Robbie and the apple-cheeked Casey would take their dogs and guns and tramp through the woods and swamps for deer, turkey squirrels, doves, quils, or whatever game was in season. At night they came to a table loaded down with food and drink.

Casey loves to quaff the suds, and he's the only major league player who has a clause in his contract forbidding him to drink even one glass of beer during the season.

"They say it makes me too heavy and fat," says Casey.

Already Casey has lost a $10 bet to Durocher, who wagered the pitcher would not come to camp weighing under 200. He showed up weighing 204.

"But I'm down to 199 now, and I'm going to reduce to 197," he says. "If they think I can pitch better at that weight it's okay with me."

A's Win, 12-10; 8 Home Runs Hit

Fullerton, Calif., March 5 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics made it two in a row in the exhibition circuit today, spanking the Portland Beavers, 12 to 10, in a free-hitting game. Each club got 16 blows and there were eight home runs.

The A's were trailing, 10 to 8, in the ninth, when Al Simmons started the rally with a circuit clout. Shortstop Fred Chapman put the finishing touches on with another one that scored two runners ahead of him. Outfielder Sam Chapman got the A's other homer while Ed Coleman, a former Athletic, banged out two of the Beavers' five.

Georgetown and G. W. Fives Clash in College Finale Tonight

5 Players End Careers In Contest

Improved Hoyas Aim to Surprise Colonials in Game At Tech High Gym

Seeking to maintain its undisputed supremacy among local college fives, George Washington will meet Georgetown at 8:30 tonight at Tech gym in the final game of the season for both teams.

A 7 o'clock preliminary will bring together the undefeated George Washington frosh and Georgetown's yearlings.

The Colonial varsity, with victories over Maryland and Georgetown, claims the city championship, but must bowl over the Hoyas again tonight to make it indisputable. A Georgetown victory would not necessarily topple G. W. from the pinnacle, but it undoubtedly would cloud the issue.

Georgetown's sophomoric team, greatly improved over the squad that the Colonials had difficulty in beating earlier in the season, is conceded more than a slight chance for an upset. The Hoyas proved their potential greatness only recently when they dealt powerful Penn State a stunning defeat. The Lions previously had beaten West Virginia, which surprised George Washington, 32-23.

Tonight's game will mark the final collegiate appearance of three Colonials and a pair of Hoyas. George Washington's seniors are Capt. George Garber, Mike Aronson and Reds Auerbach, and Georgetown's are Capt. Johnny Schmitt and Francis (Reds) Daly.

Four of the usual George Washington regulars will start against Georgetown, Garber and Matt Zunic at forwards; Joe Comer, center, and Bobby Gilham, at guard. The fifth may be Lud Urick, a football player, who has been showing steady improvement on the court. Urick would replace Auerbach.

Georgetown will present a vastly different team than that which started in the first game with the Colonials. Jim Giebel, Buddy O'Grady and Jim Kiernan, all sophomores, have been promoted to the first club at the expense of veterans. Schmitt and Irving Rizzi, a junior guard, will round out the Hoyas' starting line-up.

at a tremendous clip. It is doubtful if Goalie Braithwaite even saw it coming.

The Eagles maintained their two-goal margin in the second period as each team scored twice. Courteau, continuing his brilliant play of the first period, upped Washington's lead to 4-1 midway of the session when he cleverly eluded Defense Godfrey to take a pass from Ramsay and beat Braithwaite. It was Courteau's third goal and Ramsay's third assist.

The Rovers reduced the count to 4-2 when Loree tallied from close in on a pass from Boucher who did a nice piece of work in getting the puck away while harassed by Washington players. Washington came right back with a neat play in which Kuntz, assisted by Dewey and Covert, fired in a 20-footer, while skating at top speed. New York made its third point just five seconds before the end of the period. Rimstad counting on a double pass from McKay and Sawchuck.

River Vale Ends Orioles' Stretch, 3-1

River Vale, N. J., March 5 (AP).—The longest undefeated streak of the season in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League ended tonight at 13 as the Baltimore Orioles were defeated by the River Vale Skeeters, 3-1. The Orioles now are 8 points ahead of Washington and New York who are tied for second place with a total of 58 points.

The Orioles' string started February 8—two nights after a defeat by the Skeeters—and included one tie.

Jim Rae, River Vale stalwart defense-man, returned to action after having suffered a broken ankle, and his fine play helped largely in the victory.

River Vale spares—Swanson, Shoquist, May, Herschentrater, Nichols, Burns, McKinnon, Dutton. Baltimore spares—Dyie, Vitarelli, Hunt, Boll, Ripley, Archambault, Erickson, Calladine.

First-period scoring—(1) River Vale, May (Rae, Burns), 14:02.

Devitt Boxers Will Compete In S. A. Event

D. C. Prep to Enter Four Boys in Annual Tourney at A. M. A.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fort Defiance, Va., March 5.—Devitt Prep, making its second start in the event, will be Washington's only representative in the thirteenth annual South Atlantic high and prep school boxing tournament at Augusta Military Academy, it was announced yesterday.

Devitt will enter four men in the tourney on March 8 and 9, one more than saw action in 1939. Emory Kreiter will be in the 135-pound class, John Normyle in the 155-pound class, Ashly Long in the 165-pound class and Angel Correa in the 175-pound class. Coach Don Dunlap and Manager Johnny Stevens will also make the trip this week-end.

Only two schools will send full 12-man teams to the tournament—A. M. A., the defending champion and host school, and Charlotte Hall Military Academy. Fighters from Greenbrier M. A., Randolph-Macon Academy, Fork Union Military Academy, Covington (Va.) High, Graigsville, Clifton Forge, Low Moor, Lane, Charlottesville and Virginia Industrial School have already been entered.

Entries are also expected from Miller Training School, Massamutten, Clark, Charlottesville, Barboursville, Benedictine, McGuire and Columbia M. S.

A. M. A. and Lane, of Charlottesville, are the hot favorites for the title on the strength of season's performances. Lane is undefeated, though it will not be represented by a full squad. Augusta has won five and lost two matches, one to the Navy Plebes and the other to Staunton M. A.

Delhuds Beat Typewriters, 38-36

Baskets by Gerald Burns and Akky Viana in the fading minutes last night enabled Delaware & Hudson to deadlock the Heurich Amateur Basketball League's series at 1 to 1 as it turned back United Typewriters in Heurich Gymnasium, 38 to 36.

As a result of last night's D. & H. victory the third and final game has been set for Heurich Gymnasium Sunday night.

Gerald Burns sent D. & H. ahead with a field shot late in the last half, 36 to 34, and Akky Viana broke away to make it 38 to 34.

Harris' New Plans Call for Five in New Batting Order exception of Sid Hudson, Paul Gehrman and Joe Krakauskas, who are scheduled to work on Sunday against the Giants.

The Orlando Chamber of Commerce is regarding the game as something more than an intra-squad affair, and hailing it as the opening of the exhibition season. In an effort to derive some funds from the contest, the C. of C. is charging 75 cents for reserved seats, 55 cents for general admission.

The absence of George Case from the lead-off position on the regulars is explained by Harris, who says, "I want him to take things slowly down here. He has a habit of getting hurt in the exhibition games and there is no need of taking any chances. He'll be ready when we need him."

Most significant in the line-up announced by Harris is his apparent determination to bat Jimmy Wasdell in second place and Gerald Walker in the clean-up position. The Nats' manager stated weeks ago that he visualized Wasdell as the second-place hitter and there never was any doubt that Walker was destined to bat fourth despite some agitation for Buddy Lewis in that spot.

Meyer Weinberg Rolls 170 Game

A season league record fell last night at Lucky Strike alleys as Meyer Weinberg, of the Friendship pin team, bowled 170 for the year's highest individual game and took high set honors with 391 in the Distributors' League.

His performance led his team to a 588-1,646 high game and set and to three straight over Stover.

Larry Cox, of Projects, had 138 high game in the USHA League, and Earl Millwick, of Legal, with 362 high set, led his team to three over Office Service rollers. Ida Fitzgibbon, of St. Joseph's, had high game and set, 174-346, in the Ladies' Catholic League. St. Anthony's A team took high game honors with 559.

A. A. U. Wrestling Tourney April 5-6

The District of Columbia A. A. U. junior and senior wrestling tournament will be held on April 5 and 6 at the boys' gym of the Central Y. M. C. A., it was announced yesterday.

The committee has decided to hold two junior divisions this year—one for boys under 18 and one for boys under 16. The senior tournament will conform to the regular weights. Entries will close on midnight, March 22. Interested clubs or groups may contact the following representatives: R. B. Morgan, Y. M. C. A.; Tom Clayton, Deviss; Roy Engel, Metropolitan Police Boys' Club, No. 10; Charles Reynolds, Southeast Boys' Club; Phil Bernstein, Merrick Boys' Club, and Roland Ackerman, Y. M. C. A.

Gehringer's Back Ailing; May Retire

Tigers Lacking Sub With McCoy Gone; Other Camp News

By the Associated Press

Lakeland, Fla., March 5.—Charley Gehringer, veteran second baseman of the Detroit Tigers, said today that he may retire from baseball unless a back injury heals. The 36-year-old star quit practice abruptly today with the announcement that "if this continues I'll go home." He said that he first noticed the pains after spending several hours shoveling snow.

Detroit has no substitute for Gehringer since Bennie McCoy, his understudy last year, was declared a free agent and sold himself to the Philadelphia Athletics. If Gehringer is unable to play Manager Del Baker said that he would shift either Ralph Kress, Boyd Perry or Dick Bartell, all of whom are shortstops, to the keystone sack.

San Bernardino, Calif.—All 55 of the Pittsburgh Pirates were in action today during the club's two practice sessions. Shortstop Arky Vaughan, who signed his 1940 contract with a reported increase over the $15,000 he is believed to have received in each of the past two seasons, was appointed captain of the squad today. That carries an additional $500 in salary.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Recruit members of the Cardinal pitching staff will be given a test against the Yankees in the opening Grape Fruit League game Saturday, Manager Ray Blades said as the squad completed its fourth day of spring training. He also plans to hold out his veteran infielders and try Johnny Hopp, Eddie Lake, Martin Marion, Joe Orengo, Bob Repass and Maurice Sturdy under competitive conditions.

San Antonio, Tex.—Manager Fred Haney, of the St. Louis Browns, worked his infielders and outfielders in shifts today, while nine pitchers, hardened by several days under a blazing sun, threw their Sunday best at both groups in batting practice. Chet Laabs and two recruits, Walt Judnich and Johnny Lucadello, showed well at the plate. First Baseman George McQuinn signed his contract and reported for duty.

Avalon, Cal.—Phil Cavarretta, out almost all of last season with a broken ankle, apparently isn't going to play much baseball for the Chicago Cubs this summer. The young outfielder-first baseman has been in camp five days now—long enough for the effects of his injury to show how the ankle has slowed him. His performance is all the more disappointing in view of the fact he spent several weeks conditioning himself in Florida before reporting to Manager Gabby Hartnett.

Pasadena, Cal.—Monty Stratton, Chicago White Sox coach whose mound career was halted when he lost a leg in a hunting accident, still has hopes of pitching winning ball, but admits he still doesn't know what would happen "if they started bunting down the third base line." Stratton wears a wooden leg.

Vice President Harry Grabiner, however, says the Texan "has a job with us as coach and we don't expect any more from him than that."

Clearwater, Fla.—Mel Almada, Brooklyn outfielder who was just a so-so performer last season, is developing into a strong contender for the regular centerfield post with the Dodgers.

Almada continued to clout the ball in today's workout and Manager Leo Durocher was impressed by his improvement over last year. Feature of today's workout was a drill in which the fielders practiced cut-off plays and trapping runners between the bases.

Tampa, Fla.—Young Dick West and Rookie Myron McCormick wielded mighty warclubs and played a lot of baseball today as four teams of National League champion Reds met in the first intraclub match of the training season, a double-header.

Yannigans behind Hurlers Hutchings, Hinrichs, Riddle and Beggs shellacked a "regular" nine, 12 to 5, in a first game.

West went into leftfield for the nightcap, in which Myron McCormick uncorked a pair of two-baggers and a triple. Final score was 4 to 3 in favor of the "Wilsons" over the "Gowdys." Both contests were seven-inning affairs.

Heart Attack Fatal To Former Skate Ace

West Caldwell, N. J., March 5 (AP).—Dr. Robert A. Norris, 79, former national figure skating champion, and one time president of the Western Skating Association, died at his home today of a heart attack.

Dr. Norris, a retired dentist, was a native of Utica, N. Y., and had practiced in Chicago for 50 years. He won his figure skating championship in Chicago in the '90s.

Spring Slate At Maryland Has 54 Events

Baseball Team Faces Busiest Time With 25 Games Scheduled

With prospects encouraging, if not exceptionally bright, University of Maryland sports teams will engage in 54 contests this spring.

The baseball team will be the busiest, facing 15 home games and 10 on the road. The lacrossemen will travel for half of their ten matches; the track team will be the host in three of its four meets and the tennis squad will play 9 of 12 matches at College Park.

The Terp lacrossemen, defending national intercollegiate champions, should be a strong bet to hold their title for returning from last year's squad will be seven regulars and two near-regulars. They are Jack Grier, goalie; Leo Mueller and Jack Mueller, points; Milton Mulitz, all-American first defense; Bill Cole, center, and Jim Hall, Bill Bond, Jordan and Oscar Nevares, attack.

Must Rebuild Infield.

The baseball outlook is not so favorable, however, with Coach Burton Shipley confronted with the problem of rebuilding an infield from which three of four 1939 regulars will be missing. Adam Bengoechea, second base, is the lone holdover infield regular; George Knepley, Eddie Johnson and Shorty Chumbris having been graduated. To fill the gaps created by the absence of this trio of stalwarts Coach Shipley will look to Dick McHale, up from the frosh nine; Bill England, who will be shifted from the outfield, and Newton Cox, reserve first sacker of last season.

Maryland expects to be well fortified with pitchers. Earl Springer and Pershing Mondorff, left and right-handed aces of the 1939 team, are back and will be supplemented by a pair of promising sophomores, Lefty Leon Vannais and Fred Hunt. Bob Burns, from last year, and Mearle Duvall, a spohomore, will do the catching. The outfield also seems set with berths going to Huh Keller, Fritz Maisel and Burt Culver, all holdovers.

Lack Field Men

In track the Terps are long on runners but, as usual, short on field men. There is a discouraging dearth of hurdlers and pole vaulters so that even the presence of such sprinters and middle distance men as Joe Murphy, Jim Kehoe, Mason Chronister, Alan Miller, Gene Ochsenreiter and Tommy Fields doesn't make the situation appear rosy.

The tennis team, headed by Nate Askin and Al Ritzenberg, Southern Conference and Middle Atlantic college champions, should experience an exceptionally successful season.

All events at College Park unless otherwise specified.

By the United Press

Toronto, Ontario, March 5.—Hopes for a rematch between the two leading claimants to the world bantamweight title—Lou Salica, of New York, and Georgie Pace, of Cleveland, who fought a 15-round draw here last night—faded today when it was disclosed Pace sprained his left hand.

Pace, a Negro, suffered the injury in the fifth round of the 15-round bout, and a physician advised that he remain out of action until the hand heals.

Tom Stanley, Pace's manager, said he would cancel two fights Pace was to have had soon in San Francisco and New York, Promoter Jack Corcoran also temporarily gave up hope of rematching the fighters.

Pace is recognized as champion by the National Boxing Association, while Salica is champion in New York and affiliated States.

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on the rookies seeking jobs with the Nats at their Orlando training camp.)

JIMMY VERNON, First Baseman

On Route 40 'twixt Washington and Philadelphia the nostrils are suddenly assailed by the malodorous vapors of a sprawling oil refining community. At the first whiff, the motorist is prone to bear down on the accelerator and mutter, "Get thee behind me Marcus Hook, Pa."

JIM VERNON

Out of Marcus Hook, Pa., has come young Jimmy Vernon, son of one of its refinery workers, but he has brought a certain fragrance to the Washington baseball team. He promises to be the best fielding first baseman on the club since the Nats traded Joe Kuhel to Chicago in 1937.

Vernon is down in Orlando battling Jimmy Wasdell for the first base job and if the position were decided on fielding merits alone, Vernon would be the favorite.

He chucked a college education in 1937 for the ready money that professional baseball offered. He had commanded an athletic scholarship at Villanova on the strength of his high school play, and he was the big-shot of the Villanova freshman team in 1937. But when pro ball beckoned, he did not see the immediate value of a college education.

It was simple for Vernon to break into organized ball. Doc Jacobs, the Villanova baseball coach, owned the Easton club in the Eastern Shore League. He offered his pupil a job at first base with Easton.

Vernon came into the Washington organization at the end of that 1937 when Joe Cambria, operator of the Salisbury club in the same league, bought his contract from Jacobs. Cambria sent Vernon to Greenville in the Sally League in 1938 and then recommended him for a tryout with the Nats in the spring of '39.

He didn't get much consideration in the Nats' camp last spring despite his impressive Sally League record. Jimmy Wasdell was the rage of the camp. But when Wasdell faltered early in the season, and four other first basemen also flopped, the Nats suddenly thought of Vernon, who at the time was leading the Eastern League with a .340 batting average. They called him in from Springfield.

He played about 60 games for Washington last fall and had a batting average of .257. But that average needs explanation. Vernon didn't hit the size of his waist in his first 30 games. He brought his average up to .257 by hitting considerably over .300 in the final 30 games.

He's the best target for an infielder's throws that the Washington club has seen since Joe Judge. He could be better on ground balls, but there is considerable hope for him there. He's 6-feet 1-inch and Weighs 172, but he isn't a power hitter. They suspect, though, that he'll get his share of hits. He's a sure-shot to stick with the club and there is a vague idea that he's the best first baseman on the roster.

Furr Gets Real Test With LaSalle Monday

Washington's boxing fans will see Phil Furr, local comeback campaigner, up against his first real opposition since he entered the fight business last fall when he meets Kenny LaSalle, fifth-ranking welterweight championship contender, Monday night in the 10-round feature at Turner's Arena.

LaSalle, who administered a scientific beating to Washington's Steve Mamakos in Griffith Stadium last summer, is one of the toughest fighters in the 147-pound class today and appears certain to stop Furr's winning streak.

Furr has decisioned six opponents in a row since his first comeback appearance last October, but his opposition has been mediocre in all but one of his fights. He had tough going with Milo Theodorescu, who hardly can be compared with LaSalle as a fighter.

The fight yesterday received the blessing of the District Boxing Commission.

What Joe Turner and Gabe Menendez are after, however, is the blessing of the fans. The 1,000 turnout for the Buddy Scott-Nick Fiorentino affair failed to dampen their hopes to revive the fight business in Washington.

By matching Furr with LaSalle, it appears that the local Turner and Ahearn are about to sacrifice the only "local drawing card" currently in circulation. Phil was Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn's main "local interest," although there were evidences the Washington fans were getting tired of seeing Furr knock over "made-to-order" fighters. If he defeats LaSalle his reputation will be established once more.

Carl Snavely Guest At Cornell Smoker

Carl Snavely, head football coach of Cornell University, will be the guest of honor tonight as the Cornell Alumni Club of Washington gets together for a smoker at 8 o'clock at Columbia Country Club.

Snavely, who has been visiting with Cornell clubs around the country since the close of last season when the Indians were undefeated and rated one of the best teams in the country, will be accompanied by Emet J. Murphy, new alumni secretary.

Snavely is bringing with him moving pictures of the Cornell team in action and these will be shown.

Roosevelt Five In Durham Cage Tourney

To Play March 15-16 In Southern Scholastic Event; Riders Unbeaten

For the first time in the memory of Miss May Bradshaw, principal at Roosevelt High, the school's basketball team will enter an out-of-town tournament this year when it goes into the Southern Scholastic Basketball Tournament sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce at Durham, N. C., March 15 and 16.

Miss Bradshaw yesterday received, and promptly accepted by wire, an invitation to the event inaugurated last year. She revealed at the same time that should the school receive a bid to the Eastern States tourney in Glen Falls, N. Y., it would be just as promptly accepted. The only hitch in the latter plan is that the interhigh champions are allowed action in only one outside tournament.

Roosevelt won the crown this year without the loss of a game. It was the first in 21 years, the last team to turn the trick being that of 1918-19.

Masterson Is 8th Redskin on Line For '40 Season

Bob Masterson, 200-pound end, yesterday became the eighth veteran member of the Redskins to sign for the 1940 season. Masterson, for three years an outstanding player at the University of Miami, will be starting his third season in the pro ranks when the Washington club begins training in August.

Because of his size and speed, Masterson is an excellent pass receiver and is remembered as the Redskin who caught the touchdown aerial against the Giants in the championship game to put Washington back in the running at 9-7.

Masterson is employed here during the offseason, working as service station and parking lot superintendent.

Betty Jameson Leads Field In Florida Golf

By the Associated Press

St. Augustine, Fla., March 5.—Smiling Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., the national champion, carded a 74 today to win qualifying honors in the annual Florida East Coast Women's golf tournament.

Miss Jameson's 39-35 gave her a two-stroke margin over Patty Berg, of Minneapolis and Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach Calif., who tied for third with 77's.

Miss Berg, who was medalist last year and won the 5-to-2 victory over Miss Jameson in the finals, posted a score of 37—40—77. Miss Hicks put together a 39 and a 38 for the same total.

Second place went to Clara Callender, of Long Beach, Calif., who posted 38-37—75. Mrs. Helen Hockenjes, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., carded 38-40—78 for fifth place.

Mrs. Myron Davey, of Washington, D. C., qualified with an 84 and will face Mrs. Hockenjos in first-round play tomorrow.

A score of 91 or better was necessary to qualify for one of the 16 championship flight places.

In the first round of match play tomorrow Miss Jameson plays Mrs. P. Lyon, of Orlando, Fla., who carded an 82 today, and Miss Berg meets Mrs. A. S. Tate, of St. Augustine, who qualified with a 91. Miss Hicks' opponent will be Elizabeth Wing, of Evanston, Ill., who shot an 97, and Miss Callendar will face Mrs. T. E. Schuldenberg, of Baltimore, Md., who had an 87.

District A. A. U. Court Tourney Opens Tonight at Heurich's

Farm Credit And Marvin Fives Clash

Georgetown Hoyas Play Northeast Boys Club; Flashes Face County Team

With three city championships at stake, action in the District A. A. U. basketball tournament, sponsored by The Washington Post, will start tonight. The scene of the three battles tonight, as for the remainder of the tournament, will be the well-equipped Heurich Gymnasium, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest.

From 7:30 o'clock tonight until the titleholders in the three divisions are determined, local basketball fans will be offered the usual spirited play that goes with the "one defeat means elimination" style of competition.

To the 145-pound teams goes the honor of sending the tournament off to a flying start. The Northeast Flashes, of the Washington Boys Club, and the Prince Georges Boys Club will take the floor in a city-suburban battle that should be worthy of opening the long string of struggles.

Northeast Vs. Georgetown

At 8:30, the first of the games to involve 25 unlimited teams will start. The Georgetown Hoya Hotshots, composed of Georgetown U. football players for the most part, will tackle the Northeast Branch Boys Club team. In the night's grand finale, due to begin at 9:30, Marvin's Credit, prominent in league play hereabouts, will meet the Farm Credit Administration.

The pairings for the three classes, made yesterday, give promise of some fine basketball. In fact, the first round of the unlimited class will bring a game that marked the quarter-finals last year. Interior Department was drawn against Jewish Community Center. This game has been scheduled for next Monday night. The winner of this game should advance far, according to most observers.

United Typewriters, winners of the unlimited class last year, drew a bye in the first round and will meet the winner of the Theta Delta Chi-Petworth game in their first tournament appearance next week.

The lower bracket of the unlimited class seems to point to some fine basketball. F. B. I. will meet the winner of the Treasury-Greenbelt game while Delaware & Hudson tackles the winner of the clash between the Y. M. C. A. and Hyattsville Businessmen. Bolling Field, prominent last year, drew a bye in the first round as did Mount Vernon. These clubs clash in a second-round battle next week.

J. C. C. vs. Interior

By coincidence, the J. C. C. and Interior fives also drew each other in the first round of the 145-pound class. Both clubs are in the lower bracket which includes the Steward Brothers Photos, long prominent in local court circles.

The Stewart Brothers have their other team, the Aces, in the upper bracket of the 145-pound class which also numbers the Merrick Boys Club, last year's 145-pound champions. Merrick will make its 1940 debut against Sixth Presbyterian.

The girls will make their tournament debut next week. The first of the fair battles will pit Treasury against Veterans' Administration. The other two clubs in the upper brackets are Hyattsville and Y. W. C. A. In the lower bracket, Agriculture meets Macfarland Girls Club while Sherwood tackles Mount Rainier.

Post trophies and individual gold medals will go to the championship teams of each class. Members of runners-up will receive silver medals.

The pairings and schedule follow.

Unlimited Class

Upper bracket—J. C. C. vs. bye; Interior vs. bye; Georgetown Hotshots vs. B. C. W., Northeast Branch; Marvin's Credit vs. Farm Credit Administration; United Typewriters vs. bye; Theta Delta Chi vs. Petworth A. C.; Bell Clothiers vs. General Accounting; Census Bureau Americans vs. Bellman Fuel Co.

Lower bracket—Federal Bureau of Investigation vs. bye; Treasury Department vs. Greenbelt A. C.; Sigma Phi Epsilon vs. CCC 2349 Company, Quantico; Census Bureau Nationals vs. Boys Club of Washington, Central Branch; Delaware & Hudson vs bye; Y. M. C. A. vs. Hyattsville Business Men; Bolling Field vs. bye; Mount Vernon vs. bye.

145-Pound Class

Upper bracket—Merrick Boys Club vs. Sixth Presbyterian; B. C. W., Northeast Flashes vs. Prince Georges Police Boys Club; Y. M. C. A. vs. Congress Heights; Washington Flour vs. Stewart Bros. Aces.

Lower bracket—Stewart Bros. Photos. vs. Westminster A. C.; Art Welders vs. Friendship House; Interior Department vs. J. C. C.; Mullen Cafe vs. Ida's Department Store.

Girls' Class

Upper bracket—Treasury vs. Veterans' Administration; Hyattsville A. C. vs. Y. W. C. A.

Lower bracket—Agriculture vs. Macfarland Girls Club; Sherwood vs. Mount Rainier A. C.

Landon Soccer Team Wins, 1-0

Landon School for Boys gained a clear title to second place in the private school soccer league yesterday when Walter Johnson took a pass from Bob Orme and sent the ball across the goal for a 1-0 victory over Georgetown Prep on the Landon field.

The winners were on the offensive throughout the first three quarters but had their backs to the wall in the final session. St. Alban's is leading the league. Landon has won two, lost one, and tied three.

Vinny Burke is also on the floor, while Dick Hathaway comes rushing in. Gonzaga won the game, 34-33, to take the Catholic prep title. Lower—Bacon (4), of Blair, and West (18), of Roosevelt, go to the floor during a scramble in the first half of the double-header, which Roosevelt won, 27-17. TOURNEY, from Page 19.

A seesaw battle started that saw the lead shift hands six times before Counselman's crucial shot. At one time, however, the Johnnies were out front, 31-26, but couldn't hold it. The surprise of the period was the stellar play of Buddy Rowzee, a youngster, with the Eye Streeters for the first year.

Though Cady was high scorer of the game with 12 points, he was also the "goat" of the affair. Soon after Counselman's throw, the husky footballer was fouled by Joe O'Lone, but missed the charity toss that would have tied things up. Counselman was high for the winners with 11 points.

It was a bitter setback for a Johnny team that played its heart out. One of the best performances of the year was turned in by Corrado to no avail. With its victory, Gonzaga earned a semifinal meeting on Saturday with the winner of the Eastern-G. W. High game Thursday.

Though it won its first clash by the exact margin predicted by The Post, Roosevelt after the first quarter appeared to be in for a tough test. Minus Ernie Travis, its stellar pivotman, who remained in civvies with an injured left knee, the Riders were lucky to be on one end of a 3-3 deadlock after eight minutes.

The interhigh champs romped into a 12-6 lead at the half, but all through the opening two stanzas they were shooting wildly, and hitting less than at any time this season. Georges West rang up seven of the Riders' 12 points in the opening half.

After three quarters Roosevelt had gained its final ten-point margin, 21-11, and soon after the opening of the last session the second team took over to coast in easily.

With its victory, Roosevelt won its way into a semifinal clash with the winner of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase versus Washington-Lee High game tomorrow night. It was the second straight year Blair has bowed out in the first round of the Metro event, Gonzaga edging it out last year.

Little Hoyas Close Season With Victory

Overcoming a 3-point deficit at the half, Georgetown Prep cagers closed out their season yesterday with their second victory of the season over Maryland School for the Deaf, 36-22, on the Garrett Park floor.

Sport Barrett, who scored 20 points for scoring honors, led the home team's attack in the second half with 14 points. The Preppers led at the first and third quarters, 9-7 and 23-20. Gelmini's 11 points led the Frederick five.

Newport News Beaten, 30-29, By G. W. High

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., March 5.—George Washington High School's rugged basketeers moved into line for their first Virginia Class A Conference championship here tonight, as they turned back a plucky Newport News High School quint, 30-29, in the annual Eastern-Central division semifinals before a howling throng of 1,000. The victory gave the Presidents the right to meet E. C. Glass High, of Lynchburg, Western division champion in the State championship contest here on Saturday night.

After leading throughout most of the first three periods, the Presidents were forced to throttle a desperate last-minute rally by the opposition, as Frank Carpenter and Ernie McDermon led an assault on the basket that gave the Typhoon a one-point lead. Amos Clift, 6-foot 3-inch center, saved the game for the Presidents with a one-man scoring spree, as he dropped in five points in 40 seconds to give the Presidents a lead they never relinquished.

Newport News started off with a zone defense, but changed to man for man as the Presidents ran up a 6-1 lead, and the first quarter wound up on the long end of an 8-6 score. In the second period, G. W.'s lead was reduced by a single point, as the Presidents left the floor leading, 13 to 12.

Wilson J. V. Wins, 47-37; Finns Aided

The Wilson Teachers Jayvees turned in their twenty-first victory of the season last night defeating the Catholic University Freshmen, 47-37. The game was for the Finnish Relief Fund and proceeds were turned over to a representative of the Finnish Ambassador.

The C. U. Frosh led, 18-17, at the half but the Jayvees clicked in the closing stages and drew away. Battaglini, at center, paced the winning attack while Steins led the losers.

The Jayvees, coached by Jay Dodd, a student, play Gonzaga tonight in the Wilson gymnasium. The winners brought their point total for the season to 1,774.

Victor Pays $39.40 At Tropical Park; Jockey Flinchum Adds Another Triple

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 5.—K. A. Veit's Sun Inplay, well beaten in his lone race of the winter at Hialeah Park, today scored his first victory since last June when he nosed out the heavily backed Mar Le, from Leo J. Marks' Lemar Stock Farm, in the photo finish of the feature Star Island Purse of 6 furlongs. Paying $39.40 for $2, the Sun Briar 5-year-old sped home in 1:11 flat under Kenneth McCombs.

Mar Le just lasted to save second money by a head from the slow-starting stretch runner, Shady Brook Farm's Visigoth. The other five starters were soundly beaten. Perpetuate, a recent winner, was a shocking last, being outrun by a wide margin all the way.

Jack Flinchum added another triple to his list of achievements for the winter as a result of his easy score astride Courtland, a $13 for $2 chance in the sixth race. Alfred Robertson reported sick and canceled his mounts for the day and Flinchum subbed in the saddle on Courtland, which raced close up early, shot into command at his rider's leisure, then drew out to score by two lengths. Ranch Boss nosed out Port O'Call for the place. The favored Jacinto, after racing far back, was pulled up before entering the stretch. She appeared to have gone lame in front.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

There seems to be some question as to the identity of one of the horses burned to death at Bowie. Yesterday I wrote a little piece about the mare, Flying Feet, and the late Jockey Lou Machado. Perhaps Flying Feet was not among those to die. I wish we could have the same feeling of doubt about Lou Machado. Which reminds of the time several barns burned at Havre de Grace. The Nut, a former Whitney racer, was among those reported to have been burned. It happened that The Nut was in the entries for the next day. Before the fire most of the odds lines on the race quoted The Nut at 4-1. The next morning, with the horse reported dead, the papers carried him at 20-1. But the death of The Nut had been greatly exaggerated. It seems that he ran down to the nearby Susquehanna River, jumped in and a farmer found him the next morning over by Perryville on the other side. The man phoned the track and The Nut was vanned back. What's more he ran that afternoon and won. His pay-off price was about $35, if memory serves. Well, it looks as though the Wireless Windbag contest ran into a losing printer yesterday. H. T.'s rhyme on Art Brown got mixed up with Confucius, so I'm going to try again: "Brown is the guy who wakes up the town; you can hear his mouth for miles around; each morning at eight Happy Birthday he sings(?); and misery to all he quickly brings." I'll have to give credit where credit is due. Art has some listeners who are loyal to him. For instance, E. C. W. writes: "I have listened from the North, I have listened from the South, I have listened from the West, and I absolutely think Art Brown is the best." There will oe a badge for the Bowie meeting ready for the reader who sends in what I consider the best four-line rhyme on Mr. Blow of WO. Just mail them to Bennings, Washington Post. BILL.

First race—Fantasma may be the right one in the day's dash for juvenile maidens. Has shown enough to warrant selection. Unending and Hasten Back have speed but the outside post positions are unfavorable at this track.

Second race — Ugin packs too many speed guns for this gang, I do believe, and I'm going to string along with Jockey Eddie Arcaro. Lina's Son is favored by light weight and will be in the thick of the battle. Miss Monoa belongs in the pay circle.

Third race—Arched, with Alfred Robertson in the saddle, will be a keen actor if not the winner in this field. Appears capable of handling the top weight. Baltee has been fairly consistent and is dangerous. Deep Summer belongs with these.

Fourth race—Bunny Rabbit did well at the other town and should like this track. Gets in with feather weight and I'm going to string along. Blare, a recent winner, promises to do a lot of running in this field. Corsica is in light and is a possible surprise.

Fifth race—Night Tide will have the money-riding Schmidl in the saddle. This combination appeals to me and I'm going to be there. Felsun is tossed in with 103 pounds and is due respect. Manamaid could be the third one.

Sixth race—Whitheraway is down on the reserve list but will be in there tossing hoofs if sent postward. Among the eligibles, Life Guard seems to have the best chance. Irish Moon won recently and is due to be a factor in this better company.

Seventh race—Sun Girl appears well placed in this company with an assignment of 104 pounds. Packer will do the pushing and the combination looks like a good one. Uvalde has been groomed for a race of this kind. Reminding could take it all.

Eighth race—Red Rogue appears best placed of those gathered for this cheap affair. Flinchum rides this one and I have faith. Blanco Sweep appeared lame going to the post last out and was second. Dangerous despite back underpinning. If you would take a shot at the moon, try Charles F.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Limerick, Chick Wood and Dunlad (remember that last one?).

Best bet—Sun Girl.

SABULUS, beginning fast, lost the lead in the opening furlong, but saving ground rounding the turn, drew out through the stretch, then faltered and just lasted. MY ONE, away well, but compelled to come around the leaders in the last quarter mile, closed samely and was wearing the winner down.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:37½. Off 2:39. Winner, Bristol Stable's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CYCLE, $6.70, $4.30, $4.00; MYRNA LEE, $62.20, $22.40; MANY FLAGS, $19.80.

CYCLE, bettered his position steadily on the extreme outside, responded with determination through the stretch and won going away. MYRNA LEE, always a keen contender, made a game effort when challenged, but was no match for the winner in the final crive. MANY FLAGS, slow to get going, stole through on the inside after leaving the backstretch, stumbled on the stretch turn, came again when in stride and may have been best. PERFECT PEACE displayed excellent speed, but weakened as if in need of a race. DREEL was unable to secure clear racing room.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE BOLO, $6.40, $3.90, $3.10; HARD WAY, $8.10, $5.60; DARBY DALLAS, $4.00.

LITTLE BOLO, cleverly rated in front, opened up a winning lead through the stretch to win with something in reserve. HARD WAY, slow to get going, swung around the leaders in the last quarter mile, and closed with a belated rush on the outside. DARBY DALLAS, eased off the early pace, responded gamely to pressure and outlasted OFFICE HOUR. The latter, on the inside and in near attendance of the pace, faltered in the stretch run.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:31½. Off 3:32½. Winner, River Divide Farm's ch. c. (4), by General Lee—Nitidula. Trained by R. T. Shepp. Value to winner, $600; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:12⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HANDIBOY, $12.10, $5.50, $2.70; RADIO GOLD, $11.90, $3.10; FOXY MAUDE, $2.20.

HANDIBOY, going in much improved form, raced CLOCKS into submission in the early stages, blocked FOXY MAUDE leaving the backstretch and drew out while saving ground, but was ridden out briskly to the end. RADIO GOLD gradually bettered his position on the outside in the last quarter mile and wore FOXY MAUDE down. The latter broke a trifle slow, moved up rapidly on the inside the opening quarter mile, was held in close and cut off by the winner, and then faltered in the stretch run. CLOCKS displayed speed to the final furlong.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300; allowances. The Star Island. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:59½. Off 4:00. Winner, K. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN INPLAY, $39.40, $9.20, $4.90; MAR LE, $3.60, $2.80; VISIGOTH, $4.50.

SUN INPLAY, away alertly, went in close pursuit of the leader from the start, responded courageously when the real issue came to get up in the closing strides. MAR LE set a fast pace while saving the most ground and held on tenaciously under a drive, but could not stave off the winner's bid. VISIGOTH, slow to find his stride, responded to better his position on the outside in the last 3 furlongs and was going strongest of all at the finish. The others suffered no mishaps.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:28. Off 4:28½. Winner, Mrs. M. Rieser's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COURTLAND, $13.00, $7.80, $5.30; RANCH BOSS, $15.20, $9.90; PORT O' CALL, $7.60.

COURTLAND, under light restraint in the first half mile, went around the leaders leaving the backstretch and drew away, holding sway thereafter. RANCH BOSS, a prominent contender the entire trip, continued gamely through the stretch to outlast PORT O' CALL. The latter, in tight quarters rounding the lower turn, colsed fast when clear and would have been second in another stride. SENEGA hung in the final drive. JACINTO went lame and was pulled up.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:56. Off 4:56. Winner, A. M. Litchfield's ch. g. (4), by Rolled Stocking—La Planche de Briante. Trained by J. S. Johnston. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:44⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STOCKBOARD, $21.70, $10.10, $7.30; FOR ROMANCE, $9.30, $6.40; BUDDIE TREACY, $7.70.

STOCKBOARD, taken to the outside after entering the backstretch, followed the leaders under slight restraint until straightened into the strech, finished gamely when placed to punishment and outlasted his opponents. FOR ROMANCE worked her way up steadily, came extremely wide turning into stretch and drifted out in the last furlong, but for this she may have won. BUDDIE TREACY, well up with the pace the entire trip, made a game effort, but could not get up. WHISKOLO showed the most foot, but faltered in the stretch run.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good. Won ridden out; place same. Went to post 5:04½. Off at once. Winner, Bristol Stable's b. f. (4), by Royal Minstrel—Unique. Trained by C. Mackey. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:46⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GUITAR, $11.70, $5.80, $3.90; PRUNAY, $13.30, $9.90; CHICHARRA, $5.00.

GUITAR assumed command after going half mile, appeared beaten entering the stretch, but responded to hard pressure and won going away. PRUNAY worked her way up while saving ground and outlasted CHICHARRA in the final drive. The latter made a bold bid on the stretch turn, but faltered. MAMA LULU stumbled at the start and was not punished thereafter.

Brewers to Go To World Pro Cage Tourney

AcceptInvitation to Play In Chicago March 17; N.Y. Jewels' Star Signed

The Washington Heurich Brewers yesterday announced they had accepted an invitation to participate in the world's professional basketball tournament, opening March 17 at Chicago.

As soon as he had learned of the news, Heurich Player-Coach Mack Posnack signed John (Honey) Russell, formerly with the New York Jewels, to assist him in the Chicago tournament. Russell will serve as coach and player.

The Brewers are one of two teams invited from the American League, the Sphas being the other. Akron, Detroit and Chicago will represent the National League. Three outstanding teams have been entered from the Pacific Coast. The renowned Renaissance team is defending champion.

The Brewers are scheduled to play exhibitions with Oneonta, N. Y., March 15, and with Syracuse, of the New York State League, March 16.

Diving Championships Saturday at S. E. Branch

The city's first diving championships for boys will be staged at Southeast Branch, W. B. C., at 2:30 p. m. Three age classes will be observed—12 years and under, 15 years and under, and 18 years and under. Gold, silver and bronze medals will be presented first, second and third place finishers in each class. Max Rote, at Southeast Branch, is handling entries.

Hine Umpire Selects All-League Quintet

"Shorty" Sebastian, umpire of the Hine Recreational Basketball League, has selected an all-league team from the seven teams which recently completed their seasons. The players are John Brown, forward of U. S. S. Potomac; Pepco Barry, forward of the Celtics; Tommy Wert, center of the Celtics; "Skeeter" Taylor, guard, and Teddy Walsh, guard.

On Fishing

The International Game Fish Association in the short time since ite inception, has met with an astonishingly enthusiastic response not only from individuals and clubs, but from scientific institutions interested in the study of big game fishes. It is readily apparent, in addition to being a gargantuan stride toward the regulation of standard tackle, that it is also an equally important step forward in the history of ichthyology.

ACKERMAN

The newly formed association will keep a chart of record catches, classifying them according to the tackle on which they are caught, so that lone anglers, as well as club members, will have recognition for their catches.

Based not only on actual weight, as has been the custom in the past, but as well on the tackle used in taking them. The basis will be the thread count of the line, and in six classifications—6, 9, 15, 24, 39, and 54, so that the extraordinary feats of light tackle followers will be just as much recognized as records as those who use extra heavy tackle.

It is hoped to have fishing clubs assist and cooperate with nonmembers to the end that all catches may be properly weighed, registered, and witnessed. It is to be understood that no other use of club premises or privileges is accorded and that this privelege is only extended to fishermen whose fish approaches a world's record catch. Copies of the rules of the International Game Fish Association shall be forwarded to member clubs, member scientific institutions; international committee members; and to individuals interested in game fishing who shall so request.

The officially recognized world record catches and information about other catches, fishing grounds, seasons, tackle, etc., will be circulated to committee members who shall, in turn, distribute this information to their units, together with form sheets for registration of records.

All information concerning records will be available to any inquirer and may be used by any publication providing proper acknowledgment is made to the association and it is not restricted by copyright.

Recognition of record catches that may be made on line sizes between the approved standards will be entered on the next stronger weight. For example, catches on 12-thread will qualify on 15-thread.

The rod, reel and all other tackle quite obviously must be balanced to the line size in order to secure satisfactory results.

Sharks, which are cartilaginous fishes, as opposed to the other fishes which have a bony skeleton, will be placed in a separate classification.

Many local anglers might have the idea these regulations will never be met up with in the course of their fishing, but they are wrong. In the Chesapeake, there is always the chance of connecting with a record blue, channel bass, trout or cobia, and there is no sense in handicapping your efforts by the use of an odd-sized line. Certainly, there would be no great incentive to discard present equipment, but anything new that is required could be made to conform.

We have an idea sports stores will be more than happy to cooperate, for in doing so they could carry fewer sizes.

Beth. Steel Chief Doubts War Boom

Large Steel Company Concentrates on Plows Rather Than Arms

By the Associated Press

NewYork, March 5.—The Bethlehem Steel Corporation, a leading armament builder, turned a skeptical eye today on chances of a war munitions boom in the United States. Eugene G. Grace, president, said in his annual report to stockholders:

"Your management believes that under present conditions it is not wise to invest the capital of your corporation in additional facilities for the production of munitions or to use its present facilities for that purpose at the expense of its commercial business."

Industrial observers have noted a similar reluctance among other important companies to expand plants for the orders. Except in aircraft, Allied orders in the present conflict relatively have been moderate.

One of the biggest recipients of war orders in the World War, both from Europe and the United States, Bethlehem in peace shifted from the sword to the commercial plow in a large way.

In the past 11 years, according to its own figures, Bethlehem has spent $194,000,00 expanding and modernizing plants for the commercial market, including the construction of costly mechanized rolling mills.

Grace noted, however, the corporation retained "some facilities for producing armor plate and forgings for guns, shells, etc., for the United States Government."

Its armor plate section is said to have been engaged to capacity for several years on United States naval armament. The shipbuilding divisions have shared in both Navy and merchant marine orders so that unfilled orders in 1939 rose to record figures for peace-time, reaching an estimated $287,002,024, at the close of the year.

American Sugar Refining Profit $2,771,038 in Year

New York, March 5 (AP).—American Sugar Refining Co., reported today consolidated net income for 1939 of $2,771,058, or $6.16 a preferred share, compared with $407,088, or 90 cents a preferred share, in 1938. Joseph F. Abbott, president, said the improvement in earnings was due to "a slightly better refining margin, increased income from investments and more favorable results from Cuban operations."

Crown Cork & Seal

Crown Cork & Seal Co. and wholly-owned domestic subsidiaries reported net profit for 1939 of $1,956,045, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $2.80 a share on common. This compared with $1,213,227, or $1.37 a common share, in 1938. Plants arein Pennsylvania, Missouri, Texas, Wisconsin and Maryland.

Burroughs Adding

Burroughs Adding Machine Co. and subsidiaries reported net profit for 1939 of $2,200,814, or 44 cents a share, compared with $2,706,985, or 54 cents a share, in 1938. Plants are in Detroit and Plymouth, Mich.

American Stores 60

American Stores Co. reported consolidated net income for 1939 of $1,153,659, or 88 cents a share, compared with adjusted net income of $76,087, or 52 cents a share, in 1938. Company operates more than 2,400 groceries, mainly in the Middle Atlantic States.

National Container

National Container Corporation reported net profit for 1939 of $357,945, or $1.08 a common share, compared with $125,903, or 38 cents a share, in 1938. The company manufactures Kraft paper, shipping containers and fiber board products in Jacksonville, Fla., and New York.

Union Oil

Union Oil Co. of California reported net income for 1939 of $5,846,240, or $1.25 a share, compared with $6,862,758, or $1.47 a share, in 1938.

Daily Oil Output Up 66,922 Barrels

Tulsa, March 5 (AP).—Crude oil production in the United States increased 66,922 barrels daily to 3,804,985 for the week ended March 2, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

Dollar Wheat Back Again In Chicago Pit

European Situation And Abandoned Acreage Are Factors

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 5.—Dollar wheat came back to all deliveries today on the strength of uncertain weather conditions, disturbed European politics and reports of abandoned acreage in Oklahoma.

Prices ran up as much as 3½ cents in the last hour. The first half of the session was dull and featureless. Prices had an easy trend in first trades, but orders to buy at levels just below the market soon brought a semblance of strength. Later, the buying rush uncovered numerous orders to purchase and stop losses.

Adding incentive to the late upswing was news that clear weather prevailed over the Southwest where rains are needed to develop the crop. Reports said acreage was being abandoned in Oklahoma because of the lack of moisture. Traders hearkened to European advices that Great Britain and Italy were disputing over German coal exports.

Caution and profit taking halted the advice and some recession was noted at the finish. Private crop estimates are to be released tomorrow morning. They will furnish the first indication of how wheat weathered the winter since the December 1, 1939 estimates.

At the close, May wheat was 2⅞-3 cents above yesterday's close at 1.003½-¼, and July, 1.00¾-⅞. Corn finished ½-¾ higher; May, 56⅞-⅝; July, 57¼-⅜; oats, unchanged to ¾ up; soy beans, 1½-¼ higher; rye, 1⅛-¾ up, and lard, unchanged.

Local Banker To Speak Today On Savings

Vice President of Hamilton Bank, Will Address N. Y. Meeting

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Vice President and Cashier Wilmer J. Waller, of Hamilton National Bank, will participate in the program of the Eastern Regional Conference on Savings and Commercial Banking at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City, this week. He will speak as a member of the panel discussing "Savings Deposits Control" this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The conference, beginning today and continuing through Friday, will be opened by President Robert M. Hanes, of the American Bankers Association, who will preside at the general sessions. David Bornet, a vice president of National Savings & Trust Co., expects to attend the meeting.

Guardian Life Payments

Nearly $12,000,000 was paid to policyholders and beneficiaries by the Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America during 1939, according to that company's annual statement, filed with the local Department of Insurance. Of this, about 55 per cent appears to have been paid to living policyholders, states R. W. Griswold, mangear of the company's local office.

This is the eightieth statement issued by the New York company since its establishment in 1860 and brings the total sum disbursed to policyholders and beneficiaries during the fourscore years of its history to $311,000,000.

Assets Increase 5 Per Cent

During the last year the company's assets increased 5 per cent to a total of $140,000,000; its insurance in force to $493,000,000, resulting in a ratio of assets to insurance in force that has seldom been excelled.

Death-rate among policyholders was next to the lowest of the last seven years; and in spite of generally unfavorable investment conditions, an average net yield was achieved in excess of the 3½ per cent now being allowed on policy proceeds and dividends left with the company.

This experience has allowed continuance of the 1939 interest and dividends have been set aside for distribution to policyholders this year. Further, the company's surplus funds (held for the amount of the policyholders) have been increased by 5 per cent to a total of $5,500,000.

James A. McLain, who recently succeeded Carl Heye as president of the company after Mr. Heye's completion of 50 years' service with it, in his presidential report quotes the mean amount of real estate mortgages held, which constitute about one third of the company's assets.

Sun Life of Canada

Sun Life of Canada paid nearly $30,000,000 to United States policyholders during 1939, out of a total of $90,000,000, bringing the total of benefits paid since the first policy was issued in 1871 to $1,295,000,000. The financial statement of this company was presented by Arthur B. Wood, president, at the sixty-ninth annual meeting.

Assets of the company were shown to have increased by $39,000,000 during 1939 and now stand at $914,000,000, an all-time high. Incidentally, a large proportion of this sum is invested in the United States.

Normal earnings of the company for the year were slightly more than $24,000,000, the highest in its history. Death and disability payments during the year exceeded $26,500,000, annuity and matured endowments came to $31,000,000, while $14,000,000 were disbursed in dividends paid to policyholders. Altogether, $65,000,000 were paid out during the year to living policyholders.

The company entered the United States 45 years ago, and today its organization extends from coast to coast with branch offices in 40 States. In connection with its operations in the United States it is a matter of interest to learn that it maintains perpetual trust within the United States for the sole protection of its United States policyholders and policies issued in this country are payable in United States currency.

The company has now more than 1,000,000 policyholders, and while its operations are world-wide, by far the largest part of its business is secured in the United States, Canada and Great Britain. The company does not operate in any country of continental Europe.

New England Mutual

"Payments to policyholders of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. and their beneficiaries amounted to $39,000,000 during 1939," George Willard Smith, president of the company, announced at its annual meeting.

"Twenty-five millions, or 64 per cent of all benefit payments, went to living policyholders as matured endowments, dividends, cash values and annuities.

"For the fifth consecutive year," Mr. Smith reported, "the company's membership, as shown by insurance in force, continued to exceed all previous records. A total of 123 millions of new insurance was purchased in 1939 under 32,486 policies, and the total insurance in force now amounts to $1,573,000,000 a gain of 30 per cent since 1929.

Gold Withdrawals Exceed Imports

Foreigners shipped less gold to the United States in the week ended February 28 and instead, drew heavily on gold they already had deposited in this country.

The Commerce Department said that the week's gold imports amounted to $23,834,846, or less than half the usual amount in recent weeks. Withdrawals from earmarked gold deposits of foreign governments and central banks in the Federal Reserve banks amounted to $48,286,935 in the same period.

Identity of those withdrawing gold from earmark was not disclosed, but the import figures showed that a big decline in shipments was from the British Empire. The total of earmarked gold, after the withdrawals, was $1,082,640,000.

All Groups Advance With Rumor That Roosevelt Will Not Seek a Third Term; Tractions Strong; Long-Term Bonds Higher

New York, March 5.—Security markets advanced all along the line today by virtue of more aggressive buying in a wider range of selected issues and a vague rumor which percolated through the financial district to the effect that President Roosevelt will not be a third-termer. Extraordinary activity and price strength in tractions and buoyancy in several of the aircraft shares gave the list a lift and enabled all groups to finish higher with the exception of foods. The composite for the 100 key issues was ahead 0.22 point at the close.

Aside from shares, there was a bit of color and interest in all markets. Foreign exchange dealings uncovered weakness in sterling which descended to a new 1940 low before recovering to end fractionally under Monday's last price. Canadian dollars, French and Belgian francs also were included in the list of declining currencies. Sharp price shifts in Governments featured bonds, long-term Treasuries climbing and short-terms receding as the street strove to read the riddle of the refinancing announcement by Secretary Morgenthau contained in the day's press reports. Selling and buying here were influenced by what had not been said rather than by what was said in the Morgenthau release covering the $738,000,000 operation.

Loft Declines

Loft declined more than a point on "good news" selling, and led the list in activity. G. L. Martin featured air stocks with a 1¼ point rise with buyers attracted on announcements of New and important orders received by the company. Canadian Pacific found plenty of supporters and the stock was half a point higher above 6. The road is said to be benefiting substantially from war activity in the Dominion. Curtiss-Wright and Bendix were among other active aviations and some of the railroads enjoyed a good demand at better quotations.

The theory that increased rumors and velocity thereof precede or attend more active markets may have provided longs with some encouragement. There were quite a few bits of gossip current in addition to the one of President Roosevelt's pending retirement to civil pursuits. For instance, one source claimed that a syndicate of American banks was being formed to take over British-owned blocks of United States securities and so provide dollars to wage the war against the dictators. Other gossip related to supposed financing and expansion plans by several large companies. Of more positive influence in the course of trading was the news that British authorities had seized German coal bound for Italy, supposedly entailing a strain on the Anglo-Italian relationship.

Treasury Bonds Active

United States Government issues usurped the spotlight in the bond market today as dealers and investors strove to adjust themselves to the Treasury's tax date financing plans. After false starts and much milling around, short-term Governments were moderately lower and long Governments were sharply higher.

The largest price change of all was in the June note rights, which fell 21-32 point on the news from Washington that the issue would be refunded with a new note and that the privilege of exchanging the June notes for new bonds would not be extended. The 2¾s, which have been called for redemption on June 15, declined 9-32 point to 101 15-32 on the assumption that failure to mention this issue in the Treasury's tax date plans might mean that it would be paid off. Other notes declined from up to 5-32, while the long bonds advanced up to 11-32 of a point.

Corporate obligations were generally higher The strongest group were rail bonds, nearly all of which were firm. Among industrials, Puerto Rican-American tobacco obligations were outstanding with their advance of 4⅞ and 5 points.

Considerable irregularity prevailed in the foreign bond sector. Belgian government obligations were bid up 1 and 1½ points, and Danish, French and Norwegian issues were all in good demand. Italian issues, on the other hand, were soft, presumably on the effort of the British navy to block shipment of German coal by water to Italy.

Mail Order Sales Make New Records

Chicago, March 5 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co. reported today that February sales this year totaled $30,530,347, the best February in the concern's history. The figure represented an increase of $5,566,240, or 22.30 per cent over sales during February, 1939.

Sears Roebuck & Co. reported today February sales of $40,835,743, an increase of 17 per cent over the $34,900,544 in the same month of 1939. February is the first month of the firm's fiscal year. T. J. Carney, president, said that beginning with February sales hereafter will be reported on a monthly instead of a four-week basis.

Cotton Futures Rise 35 to 70 Cents Per Bale

New York, March 5 (AP).—The cotton futures market caught a little of the buying fever that affected the Chicago wheat pit and prices advanced 7 to 14 points today. Closer home, and of equal importance, was renewed interest in textiles, which attracted steady demand from trade interests.

The market was encouraged at the outset by firmness in overseas markets. Bombay participation in the local market, however, which has kept the ring humming in some recent sessions, was checked by an East Indian textile strike.

Speculative forces nibbled at offerings when they watched the price firmness in the March delivery despite issuance of 14 transferrable notices against the spot month. The notices were soon stopped by two leading spot interests, which tended to check liquidation.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures crept higher today despite a dearth of speculative interest. Final prices were up 3 to 4 points.

New buying seemed discouraged by continued heavy arrivals of hogs, a lower hog market and quiet cash oil trade, but action of outside markets kept pressure at a minimum.

Sales totaled 22 lots: May, 7.10 bid; July, 7.19 bid; September, 7.26.

Crude oil was unchanged at 6 cents bid in the Southeast and Valley and Texas, 5¾@5⅞ bid.

Loft to Split Candy From Pepsi-Cola

New Corporation Will Be Known As Loft Candy Corp.

By the Associated Press

New York, March 5.—Stockholders of Loft, Inc., will receive shares in a new concern, the Loft Candy Corp., under a plan to separate the Loft holdings in Pepsi-Cola Co., recent earner of large profits from a beverage of that name.

Loft, Inc., for many years has operated in a chain store candy and ice cream business in the East but the rapid increase in Pepsi-Cola earnings came to overshadow the others. Loft holds 205,437 out of the 259,277 shares of capital stock of the Pepsi-Cola Co.

In carrying out the plan for separation of the candy business from the Pepsi-Cola holdings, the directors announced a distribution of one share of Loft Candy Corp. the new unit, for each outstanding share of Loft, Inc., payable April 2 to holders of record March 15.

Excluding dividends received last year from Pepsi-Cola stock, Loft, Inc., and subsidiaries reported consolidated net loss of $1,487,599 compared with net loss of $946,151 in 1938.

The dividends from Pepsi-Cola amounted to $3,081,555, of which $1,531,820 was credited to the Loft investment in the beverage company under the segregation plan and $1,549,734 assigned to the income account of Loft.

Washington Gas, Net Gains Over Last Year

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co. filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday shows operating revenues of $1,112,811 for January this year compared with $903,257 for January a year ago, an increase of $209,554. Operating Expenses, including taxes, amounted to $809,011 in January this year, an increase of $187,632 over January 1939 due principally to the production and handling of the greater gas output.

Nonoperating income this January shows an increase of $7,318, amounting to $11,899. Interest charges this year were $74,496, a slight increase over January a year ago, and the net result from January's operations was a net income of $241,203 this year, compared with $213,715 in 1939.

The company reports gas sales of 1,734,880 M cubic feet in January this year, an increase of 383,097 M cubic feet, or 28 per cent, over January last year, largely due to the colder weather this year.

Treasury Bills 3 Times Subscribed

The Secretary of the Treasury announces that the tenders for $100,000,000, or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be dated March 6 and to mature June 5, 1940, which were offered on March 1, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks. The total applied for was $309,711,000 and the total accepted $100,667,000.

All of the accepted bids were tendered at par, and of the amount so tendered 65 per cent was accepted.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Although Mrs. Meyer D. Rothschild and her teammates lost to M. D. ("Jimmy") Maier and his partners in a knockout match in the team-of-four championship, they had at least one good board to remember. Mrs. Rothschild and H. A. Goldwater bid and made six no trump on the cards shown in today's box. Edward Hymes and Sam Fry, jr., of Maier's team, reached six diamonds and were set.

The key play of the hand was finessing the nine of spades after dropping the jack from East. Goldwater played Jack Dreyfuss for four spades, finessed the nine and won the hand. His opponent in the other match played for the spades to break three-three and lost.

Maier opened the eight of diamonds; Goldwater won and ran the remaining diamond tricks. East discarded two clubs and two hearts; declarer threw two clubs and one heart. Goldwater played the king of spades and led over to the ace, felling East's jack. Now, on his lead of a small spade from the board, it was a question whether Maier had been false-carding in his play of the jack and had the ten, or not.

It seemed doubtful that the junior member of the Four Aces of the recent cowinner of the Goldman pairs with Charles Lochridge would make such an obvious discard.

Goldwater decided Maier's play was true and finessed Dreyfuss for the ten. He was right, and the six diamonds, four spades and two aces made up the twelve tricks for his contract.

Listen! with Slocum

With "WJSV Week" grinding gayly along and the little matter of full time operation on 50,000 watts just a matter of a few hours, Columbia's station for the Nation's Capital is in receipt of several testimonials of good will, two of which are particularly flattering.

The first is from Franklin D. Roosevelt, who in a letter to William Paley, congratulates the president of the Columbia Broadcasting System. Mr. Roosevelt says that the completion of the new 50,000 watt transmitter for WJSV, the key station of the Columbia system in the Nation's Capital, symbolizes not merely the commendable development of the station, but of the entire broadcasting industry. It symbolizes not merely the remarkable technical advance in the art, the President says, but also the ever increasing contribution of radio to a better understanding of public affairs.

The President's letter to Paley goes on to say that Station WJSV and the Columbia network have played a stirring part in depicting the events of the last seven years, events that have been brought to the firesides of millions of Americans by radio.

The second letter, this to A. D. Willard, jr., general manager of WJSV, is from John Locher, president of the Washington Central Labor Union, who congratulates Willard in behalf of that union, with over 150 local groups representing 130,000 workers and in behalf of the Washington Building and Construction Trades Council, with 29 local unions and about 15,000 members.

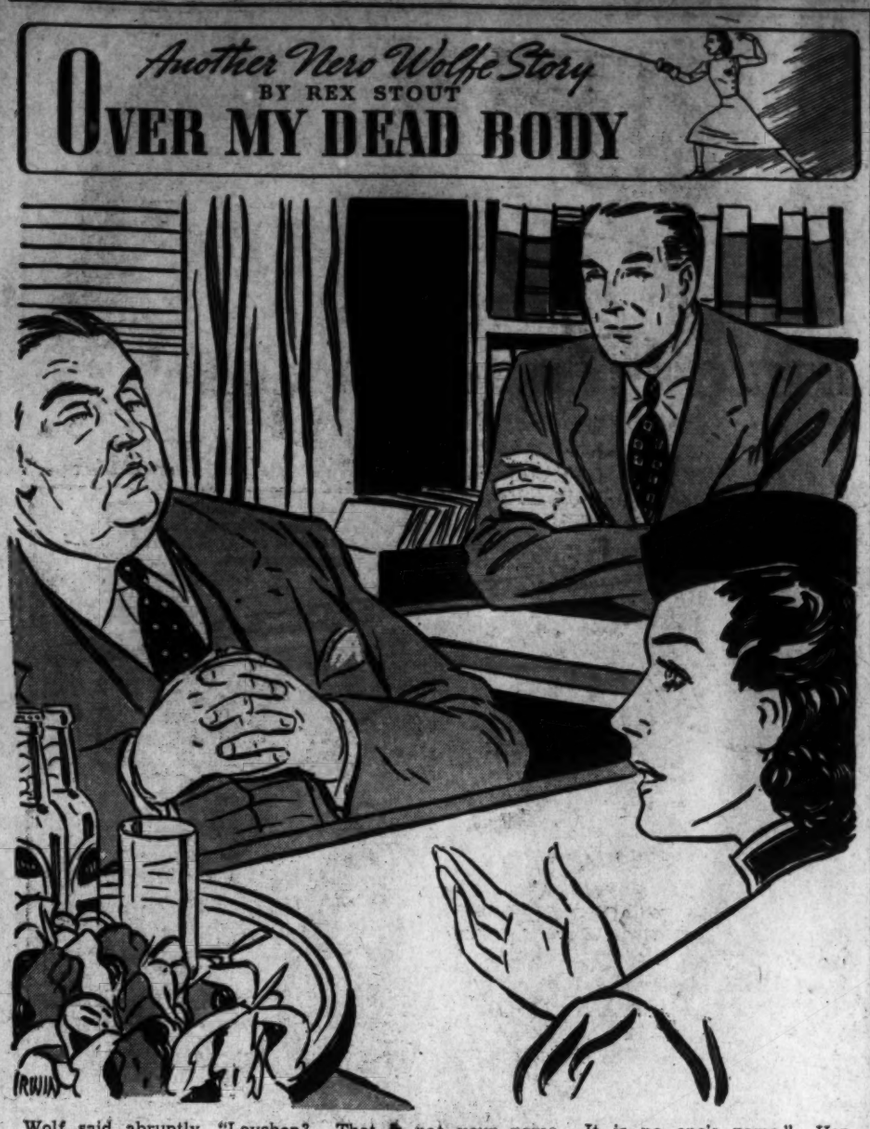
In his letter, Locher praises WJSV for its unbiased reporting of labor news events and for its labor attitude in the construction of the new $300,000 transmitter at Wheaton which was a 100 per cent union job. He says that union men who helped build the Wheaton transmitter, and who have worked elsewhere on similar jobs, contend that the WJSV transmitter is beyond any question of a doubt the last word in modern equipment and construction.

NUTS AND JOLTS

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY



Wolf said abruptly, "Lovchen? That is not your name. It is no one's name." Her lashes fluttered. "My name, she said, "is what I say it is"

Chapter 1

THE BELL RANG and I went to the front and opened the door and there she was. I said good morning.

"Pliz," she said, "I would like to see Misturr Nero Wolfe."

Or you might have spelled it plihz or plizz or plihsz. However you spelled it, it wasn't Middle West or New England or Park Avenue or even East Side. It wasn't American, and naturally it irritated me a little. But I politely invited her in and conducted her to the office and got her a chair, and then extracted her name, which I had to ask her to spell.

"Mr. Wolfe will be engaged until 11 o'clock," I told her, with a glance at the wall clock above my desk, which said 10:30. "I'm Archie Goodwin, his confidential secretary. If you'd like to save time by starting on me . . ."

She shook her head and said she had plenty of time. I asked if she would like a book or magazine, and she shook her head again, and I passed her up and resumed at my desk, where I was heading up a bunch of hybridizing cards for use upstairs. Five minutes later I had finished and was checking them over when I heard her voice behind me:

"I believe I would like a book. May I?"

I waved at the shelves and told her to help herself and went on with the checking. Presently I looked up when she approached and stood beside me with a volume in her hand.

"Misturr Wolfe reads this?" she asked. She had a nice soft low voice which would have sounded all right if she had taken the trouble to learn how to pronounce words. I glanced at the title and told her Wolfe had read it some time ago.

"But he stoodies it?"

"Why should he? He's a genius, he don't have to study anything."

"He reads once and then he is through?"

"That's the idea."

She started for her chair and then turned again. "Do you read it perhaps?"

"I do not," I said emphatically.

She half smiled. "It's too complicated for you, the Balkan history?"

"I don't know, I haven't tried it. But I understand all the kings and queens got murdered. I like newspaper murders better."

SHE TURNED off the smile and went and sat down with the book, and appeared to be absorbed in it a few minutes later when, the checking finished, I jiggled the handful of cards neatly together and departed with them, and mounted the two flights of carpeted stairs to the top floor and the steeper flight to the roof level, where the entire space was glassed-in for the orchids except the potting room and the corner where Horstmann slept. Passing through the first two rooms, down the aisles with silver staging and concrete benches and thousands of pots holding everything from baby seedlings to odontoglossums and dendrobiums in full bloom, I found Nero Wolfe in the farm room, standing with his thumbs on his hips, frowning at Horstmann, who in turn was scowling reproachfully at an enormous coelogyne blossom with white petals and orange keels. Wolfe was muttering:

"A full two weeks. At the very least, 12 days. As Per Hansa says, I don't know what God expects to accomplish by such management. If it were only a question of forcing—well, Archie?"

I handed Horstmann the cards. "For that batch of miltonias and lycastes. The germination dates are already in where you had them. There's a female immigrant downstairs who wants to borrow a book. She is 22 years old and has fine legs. Her face is sullen but well-arranged and her eyes are dark and beautiful and worried. She has a nice voice, but she talk like Lynn Fontanne in 'Idiot's Delight.' Her name is Carla Lovchen."

Wolfe had taken the cards from Horstmann to flip through them, but he stopped to send me a sharp glance. "What's that?" he demanded. "Her name?"

"Lovchen." I spelled it, and grinned. "Yeah, I know, it struck me too. You may remember I read 'The Native's Return.' She seems to be named after a mountain. Mount Lovchen. Tsernagora. Montenegro, which is the Venetian variant of Monte Nero, and your name is Nero. It may be only a coincidence, but it's natural for a trained detective—"

"What does she want?"

"She says she want to see you, but I think she came to borrow a book. She took that 'United Yugoslavia' by Henderson from the shelf and asked if you've read it, and do you stoody it, and am I reading it and soon. She's down there with her pretty nose in it. But as I say, her eyes look worried. I had a notion to tell her that because of the healthy condition of the bank account—"

I turned it off because he was ignoring me and giving his attention to the cards. Reflecting that that was an unusually childish gesture even for him, since it lacked only 3 minutes till 11 o'clock, the hour when he invariably proceeded from the plant rooms to the office, I snorted audibly, wheeled, and went for the stairs.

THE IMMIGRANT was still in the chair, reading, but had abandoned the book for a magazine. I looked around for it to return it to the shelf, but saw that she had already done so; it was back in its place, and I gave her a good mark for that because I've noticed that most girls are so darned untidy around a house. I told her Wolfe would be down soon, and had just got my notes cleared away and the typewriter lowered when I heard the door of his personal elevator clanging, and a moment later he entered. A pace short of his desk he arrested his progress to acknowledge the visitor's presence with a little bow which achieved only one degree off the perpendicular, then continued to his chair, got deposited, glanced at the vase of cattleyas and the morning mail under the weight, put his thumb to the bottom to summon beer, leaned back and adjusted himself, and sighed. The visitor, with the magazine closed on her lap, was gazing at him through long lowered lashes.

Wolfe said abruptly and crisply, "Lovchen? That is not your name. It is no one's name."

Her lashes fluttered. "My name," she said with a half smile, "is what I say it is. Would you call it a convenience? Not to irritate the Americans with a name like Kraljevitch?"

"Is that yours?"

"No."

"No matter." Wolfe sounded testy—as far as I could see, for no reason. "You came to see me?"

Her lips parted for a soft little laugh. "You sound like a Tsernagore," she declared. "Or a Montenegrin if you prefer it, as the Americans do. You don't look like one, since Tsernagores grow up and up, not out and all around like you. But when you talk I feel at home. That's exactly how a Tsernagore speaks to a girl. Is it what you eat?"

I TURNED my head to enjoy a grin. Wolfe demanded, almost bellowing at her, "What can I do for you, Miss Lovchen?"

"Oh, yes." Her eyes showed the worry again. "I was forgetting on account of seeing you. You a famous man, I know that of course, but you don't look famous. You look more like——" She stopped, made a little circle with her lips, and went on, "Anyway, you're famous, and you have been in Montenegro. You see I know much about you. Hvala Bogu. Because I want to engage you on account of some trouble."

"I'm afraid——"

"Not my trouble," she continued rapidly. "It's a friend of mine, a girl who came with me to America not long ago. Her name is Neya Tormic." The long black lashes flickered. "Just as mine is Carla Lovchen. We work together at the studio of Nikola Miltan on Forty-eighth street. You know perhaps? Dancing and fencing are taught there. You know him?"

"I've met him," Wolfe admitted gruffly, "at the table of my friend Marko Vukcic. But I'm afraid I'm too busy at present——"

She swept on in front. "We're good fencers, Neya and I. Corsini in Zagreb passed us with foils, epee and saber. And the dancing of course is easy. We learn the Lambeth Walk in 20 minutes, we teach it to rich people in five lessons and they pay high, and Nikola Miltan takes the money and pays us only not so high. That is why, in this foolish trouble Neya has got into, we can pay you not so much as you might expect from some people, but we can pay you a little, and added to that is the fact that we are from Zagreb. It's not a little trouble Neya has got into, it's a big one, through no fault of hers because she is not a thief, as anyone but an American fool would be aware. They'll put her in jail, and you must act quickly, at once——"

Wolfe's face was set in a grimace, showing that he was in the throes of an agitation away beyond his chronic reluctance to bother his mind about business when the bank balance was up in five figures. Displaying a palm at her, he tried to expostulate:

"I tell you I'm too busy——"
